U.S. could fire on Soviets in Syria

By PHILIP W. SMITH
Newhouse News Service

WASHINGTON — U.S. air strikes against Syrian anti-aircraft batteries in Lebanon brought U.S. forces a step closer to possible confrontation with 7,000 Soviet troops in Syria.

That is a condition neither side appears to want.

President Reagan raised the ante in Lebanon with his decision to retaliate Sunday for attacks on lightly armed Navy reconnaissance planes by Syrian-manned missile sites north and east of Beirut.

While no Soviet combat troops are thought to be in Lebanon, 7,000 to 8,000 Soviet soldiers are manning surface-to-air missile sites around Damascus. The missiles at those sites are capable of hitting planes flying over Lebanon.

Analysis

The question is what Reagan will do under his new policy of retaliating against attacks on the multinational peacekeeping force in Beirut if one of those attacks comes from across the Syrian border in an area where Soviet troops are based.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz Monday accused Moscow of being "connected with Syrian aggression," but steered clear of placing any direct blame on the Kremlin for recent Middle East tension.

In an earlier news conference Monday in Moscow, Kremlin spokesman Leonid Zamyatin said "the Arab countries will take the measures necessary" in their "difficult" fight against the United States and Israel. He said the Soviet Union "will support those who are fighting the Israeli and American aggression."

Moscow "censures and condemns this act of aggression," Zamyatin said.

Officials here regarded the Soviet statement as fairly mild and sought to keep their own statements low-key.

But Shultz said U.S. policy now is to "return fire to the source of fire."

On Sunday, air power was "the best means" available to retaliate, Shultz said. The Navy lost two light bombers in the strike, with one pilot apparently killed and another captured.

"We will defend ourselves," he said. "That is all the justification it needs."

The statements in both capitals and the actions of the two sides in Lebanon and Syria bring the superpowers closer to a direct confrontation between their forces than at any time since the 1973 Middle East war.

Israeli troops had the Egyptian Third Army totally cut off and surrounded in October 1973, when the late Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev threatened to intervene and began moving Soviet naval forces toward the region.

Former President Richard M. Nixon ordered a worldwide U.S. nuclear alert, and former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger rushed to Tel Aviv to demand that the Israelis honor a previously agreed-to ceasefire.

The Israelis complied, and the Soviets backed away from their threat.

In the current situation in Lebanon, however, events have frequently escalated rapidly, with no one seeming to be in control.

The Syrian government has emphasized for more than a year that "we are not alone" in facing Israel and troops of the multinational force in Lebanon.

Syrians snatch first U.S. POW

By JACK REDDEN
United Press International

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Syria vowed Monday to hold a captured American airman until U.S. Marines leave Lebanon and announced that another flier downed by Syrian gunners during a U.S. air strike had died of his wounds.

In Moslem West Beirut, a car bomb blew up in a crowded street, killing at least 14 people and wounding more than 80, police said.

At Beirut Airport, U.S. Marines filled sandbags and reinforced their positions following the assault Sunday that killed eight Marines and wounded two others.

Marine Lt. Col. Ray Smith said some of the Marines who died Sunday had moved out of their protected positions without permission.

On the mountain ridge above the Marines, the Lebanese army and Syrian-backed Druze Moslem rebels exchanged mortar and rocket barrages late Monday. The sound of the battle rolled through the empty streets of the capital.

In Tripoli, 42 miles north of Beirut, heavy fighting broke out between Syrian troops and Lebanese Moslem supporters of Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat, with shells crashing around his headquarters in the worst clashes since a cease-fire agreement 11 days ago.

The Syrians are supporting a rebellion within the PLO aimed at ending Arafat's leadership of the organization.

In West Germany, Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger said the Marines in Beirut are considering better protection, including changing their vulnerable positions. Similar plans were discussed after 239 Marines were killed by a car bomb Oct. 23.

The shelling of the Marine base from the Syrian-controlled mountains overlooking Beirut began Sunday hours after bombers based on U.S. aircraft carriers in the Mediterranean struck three Syrian target areas east of Beirut.

Damascus denounced the air strike in which two American aircraft were downed. One pilot safely parachuted into the sea but the two-man crew of the other downed plane fell into Syrian hands.

Syrian Defense Minister Mustapha Tlas said Lt. Mark Lange of Detroit died of his injuries after being found in the wreckage of his plane and Lt. Robert Goodman, Lange's bombardier-navigator, was a prisoner.

Tlas was quoted by official Beirut Radio as saying Goodman, 27, of Portsmouth, N.H., "will be set free as soon as the war ends and the Americans leave Lebanon."

He said the body of Lange, 26, of Detroit, "will be delivered to the American embassy in Damascus."

Photographs taken Sunday after the American attack showed Goodman shaken but apparently healthy, while Lange had lost a leg in the crash of his A-6 Intruder aircraft.

Mother prays

NEW YORK (UPI) — The mother of a Navy flight navigator downed and captured by Syrian-backed guerillas in Lebanon prayed Monday her son will be treated well by the captors.

Marilyn Goodman of Queens, mother of Lt. Robert O. Goodman, 27, said she was certain her son would be all right "if he keeps his wits about him."

"I know he won't give up," she said. "He's a person who is practical and very down to earth and self-reliant. He just has to survive."

Mrs. Goodman said Robert's ordeal was the most difficult thing she had ever handled.

Valley's vicious weather not over yet

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Well, the upper atmosphere charts and the frontal systems on the weather maps aren't going to help us out of this one for a while, it seems.

Basically, Magic Valley residents can expect more snow throughout the week, and it could get nasty again late today and Wednesday, weather forecasters are saying.

This storm could strike just as people are starting to recover from last weekend's wild weather. Snowplows still are clearing off roads, and school children still are out of their classrooms.

Driving disgusting — B1

The Twin Falls, Gooding, Jerome, Valley and Minidoka school districts all had canceled classes for today, as of late Monday.

Of course, we've been through this before. You might remember this shoveling business from a couple years ago, when a foot of snow hid the streets and the sound of spinning tires pierced the neighborhoods.

But the National Weather Service says we haven't been through it this early for at least 20 years — and maybe longer.

Late Monday afternoon, the white stuff was 12 inches deep at Twin Falls, the modern-history record for the first few days of December. The closest recent snow depth came in 1968, when it stacked up to 10 inches. That was on the 23rd of the month, says Bill Galkin, a National Weather Service specialist at the Kimberly station.

The last storm also may qualify as producing the largest snowfall in 24 hours. About five inches fell at once, and that hasn't happened since 1968 either, he says. Normally, the area gets about five inches of snow during the whole month.

The next blows may not set the same types of records, but they could cause aggravations. Weather forecasters were expecting an inch or two last night, and a new round of snow tonight and tomorrow.

"There's a good possibility of picking up three or four inches in the next one," Galkin says.

There are reasons for all this blustery activity. Basically, the three storms that have hit the area since Thanksgiving have been blowing in off the Pacific Coast and passing south into Nevada and Utah. They have been followed by cold air.

"That leaves us on the colder side of the storm, and we get snow instead of rain," said Steve Brown, a meteorologist with the Weather Service in Boise. Instead of the mountains alone catching the snow, the valleys have been getting blanketed as well.

Shuttle calls home

By AL ROSSITER JR.
UPI Science Editor

SPACE CENTER, Houston — The shuttle astronauts talked to President Reagan and the West German chancellor in a space conference call Monday and later produced a television view of a glowing rod of melting silicon in a sunlamp furnace.

Scientists on the ground reported that Spacelab's instruments had discovered swamp gas high in the atmosphere for the first time, and another made important observations of star debris being sucked into a distant black hole.

Commander John Young, West German physicist Ulf Merbold and biomedical engineer Byron Lichtenberg participated in the unprecedented, 10-minute televised conversation between Reagan at the White House and Chancellor Helmut Kohl, who was in Athens attending an economic meeting.

Co-pilot Brewster Shaw and NASA scientist-astronauts Owen Garriott and Robert Parker were in Columbia's cabin at the time.

"This space shuttle mission represents the enormous potential available to mankind, Reagan said.

"The shuttle is demonstrating that technology can be used to bring people together in a new spirit of enterprise and cooperation to better their lives, ensure the peace for all mankind."

Shaw was told 10 hours later that he and his colleagues will have to wait until Tuesday morning before

Testing of dump area wells turns no trace of poisoning

By STEVEN CHRISTENSEN
United Press International

BOISE — Samples of water from 20 private wells near a hazardous waste dump in Owyhee County showed no contamination from the nearby storage of toxic materials, the Environmental Protection Agency said Monday.

EPA State Director Lynn McKee said toxicologists tested wells located within three miles of the waste site to ensure there had been no leaching of poisons from underground trenches at the Grand View site into drinking or irrigation supplies.

"We had to assure ourselves there had been no contamination. Now we feel comfortable with it," he said.

McKee said federal scientists also tested the six wells nearest the dump for traces of 129 "priority toxic pollutants." In addition, state analysts sampled all 20 wells to ensure drinking supplies were safe, he said.

"Some of the wells showed minute amounts of arsenic and others showed arsenic at the maximum allowable level," the director said, adding arsenic occurs naturally in Idaho groundwater.

"Levels for fluoride were above the maximum," McKee said. "But that's quite common in drinking water in Idaho and also occurs naturally."

He said neither substance appeared related to the storage of thousands of drums containing toxic waste at a dump operated by Envirosafe Services of Idaho.

The firm came under fire last month when a sampling of about 3,000 buried barrels showed about 30 percent of the drums contained liquid waste in violation of federal law.

McKee said ESI has already prepared a plan to stop any future burial of fluid toxins. That plan, drawn up in the face of a EPA threat to stop all liquid shipments to the desert storage site, "looks good on paper," he said.

Federal law requires that all liquid waste be solidified before it is buried. The EPA has levied $150,000 in fines against the dump's operators as a result of the survey.

The director said EPA inspectors would visit the dump later this week to ensure the plan has been implemented. If it has, he said, the company would be permitted to continue receiving liquid waste.

"If the procedures are not in place, then the (EPA) ban could become effectively immediately," he said. "And the ban will remain in effect until we are sure they have implemented procedures to ensure liquid wastes are properly handled."

McKee added inspectors had hoped to tour the site last week, but were blocked by a series of heavy snow storms that blanketed western Idaho.

EPA Regional Administrator Ernesta Barnes said Monday the agency is pleased with the results of the well tests.

"We wanted to satisfy ourselves that there was no imminent health threat from contamination in domestic wells in the area," she said. "These results have eliminated those concerns. It is very good news."

Polish troops placed on alert

WARSAW, Poland (UPI) — Polish leader Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski ordered a virtual nationwide military alert Monday, sending troops out in an apparent bid to defuse protests expected next week on the anniversary of martial law.

Jaruzelski ordered "a nationwide action of the military inspection units" to conduct mass inspections of municipal services and check "defense readiness" throughout the country, the official PAP news agency said.

The military action, which followed a weekend announcement that police will begin using expanded stop-and-search powers, began at midnight Monday. The report did not say how long it would last.

Child-killing conviction stands

ATLANTA (UPI) — The Georgia Supreme Court upheld Monday the murder conviction and life sentence of Wayne B. Williams, accused of killing 29 children and young adults in a string of murders that terrorized Atlanta for nearly two years.

The court upheld the Feb. 27, 1982, conviction of Williams, 25, for the killings of Jimmy Lee Payne, 21, and Nathaniel Cater, 27, two black men whose deaths were among 29 investigated by a special police task force from mid-1979 through early 1981. Most of those killed were black children.

Peace mission 'inappropriate'

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (UPI) — The government barred entry Monday to 165 American and Canadian church women who planned a 3-day "pilgrimage for peace" in Honduras to protest the U.S. military presence in Central America.

A leader of one of the two groups trying to enter Honduras said the women were "deeply outraged." Another questioned whether the U.S. Embassy had been involved in the decision.

Although there was no official government statement, a Honduran immigration agent who refused to be identified said the women were turned back "because they came to preach things that are not appropriate for the people."

Kamiah officers chase fugitive

KAMIAH (UPI) — Idaho County authorities launched an unsuccessful ground and air search Monday for a man suspected of murdering a Kamiah-area man, Chief Deputy Larry Murray said.

Thomas Barr, age unavailable, was killed at his home at about 8:30 p.m. Sunday when he suffered a fatal shotgun wound, Murray said.

Authorities issued a first-degree warrant Monday for the arrest of Gary Brayshaw, an acquaintance of the victim, Murray said.

He would not say why authorities believe Brayshaw committed the crime, but he said an investigation prompted deputies to conduct a day-long search for the suspect through much of northcentral Idaho County.

Tree selected for White House

ORTING, Wash. (UPI) — A 30-foot noble fir was cut down Monday and prepared for shipment to the White House, where it will be the official Christmas tree.

Ken Scholz, 38, used a chainsaw to fell the tree that had stood outside his home for almost a quarter century, and his family began preparing it for a cross-country flight to the nation's capital.

It was cut two days early to allow enough time to tie up all the branches and wrap the tree in burlap, said Jo Ann Scholz, Ken's wife and business partner.

The Scholz family, including children Monte, 12, and Kristi, 9, will accompany the fir Wednesday on a Northwest Airlines flight to Washington, D.C.

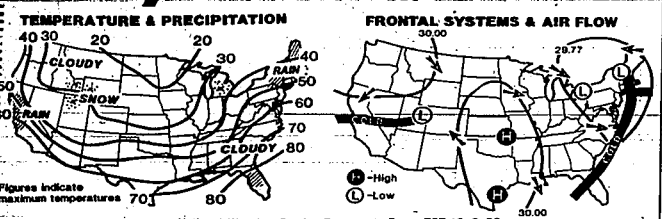
Explosion rocks Texas plant

HIGHLANDS, Texas (UPI) — A wall of flames nearly 100 feet high roared through a chemical plant Monday night, setting off explosions every few minutes and prompting firefighters to evacuate some 600 people, officials said.

One firefighter was injured fighting the huge blaze, which began about 6:20 p.m. MST at Hi-Port Industries, 30 miles east of Houston, the Department of Public Safety said.

Several firefighters were treated for minor smoke inhalation at the scene, but there were no reports of any other serious injuries.

Today's weather



National Weather Service Forecast to 7 p.m. EST 12-6-83

Like it or not, more snow on the way

Twin Falls, Burley-Rupert, Jerome-Gooding areas:
Increasing chance of snow by this afternoon, continuing through Wednesday. Highs both days of 25 to 35 degrees; lows in the upper 20s.

Camas Prairie, Hailey, Wood River Valley:
Snow increasing by this afternoon and continuing into Wednesday. Highs in the middle to upper 20s; lows near 20.

Northern Nevada and Utah:
Mostly cloudy today over Nevada, with periods of snow or rain, with the snow level near 5,500 feet by this afternoon. Highs near 40 today; lows in the 20s. Variable cloudiness over Utah through Wednesday. Scattered snow at times. Highs of 25 to 35; lows in the 20s.

Synopsis:
One snowstorm after another.

That's the short-range forecast for the Magic Valley and most of Idaho.

The extended forecast for the Magic Valley and southern Idaho holds out hope for only some moderation in temperatures from Thursday through Saturday. That period is expected to see continuing cold conditions, with a chance of more snow. Most highs will be in the 30s, with most lows in the teens.

On Monday, a weak storm off the Pacific crossed the state, with clouds and light snow. Partial clearing was expected in the southwest by Monday night, but light snow showers were likely over most of the state. The heaviest accumulations — 1 to 2 inches — were anticipated in the Panhandle, and a traveler's advisory was issued for that region.

Another storm in the series moving inland is expected to spread snow over the state by this afternoon.

On Monday afternoon, only traces of new snow were reported over Idaho, but gusty southeast winds developed in the southwest, with gusts topping 25 mph at the Boise Air Terminal and at Mountain Home Air Force Base. Temperatures remained below freezing, with 20-degree readings in the valleys and in the teens in the mountains.

A band of fresh snow crossed the Treasure Valley on Monday afternoon, leaving about an inch of new snow near Ontario, Ore., and from a half-inch to an inch in the Boise area. Streets and highways were slippery in the snow's wake.

The state's warmest temperature was 55 degrees at Emmett. The coldest morning low was 26 degrees below zero — at Stanley.

Elsewhere in the nation Monday, the warmest temperature reported was 88 degrees at Brownsville, Texas, and Jacksonville, Fla., and the coldest was 17 below zero, at West Yellowstone, Mont.

Idaho road report

The Reagan Administration would say only that negotiations were under way with the Syrian government and refused to give any details on the fate of the men.

Reagan said he ordered Sunday's air strike in retaliation for Syrian attacks at U.S. reconnaissance flights on Saturday.

Sunday's Marine deaths raised to 255 the number of U.S. servicemen confirmed killed in Lebanon since the Marines — now numbering some 1,200 — were ordered to take part in a multinational peace-keeping force.

In Washington, White House Spokesman Larry Speakes reported U.S. planes flew over Lebanon after Sunday's air strike to assess the damage but said there were no reconnaissance flights Monday.

The downing of an A-6E and an A-7E in the strike in the Shouf and Meten mountains east of Beirut marked the first American combat losses of warplanes since the Vietnam conflict.

Nonetheless, the Pentagon said its analysis of the raid showed the strike was "very successful," with three major Syrian positions hit and almost all specific targets destroyed or damaged.

Speakes said there was no plan for the Marines in Beirut go to a combat role. But, he said, "We will respond if attacked and we will continue" carrying out reconnaissance flights.

At the United Nations, U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar decried the "dangerous ... alarming and tragic" cycle of weekend violence and appealed for an end to all hostilities.

U.S. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick met with Perez de Cuellar and later said she had asked for U.N. help in securing the release of the captured American airman.

getting word on when they are to return to Earth — Wednesday, Thursday or possibly even Friday.

The problem is weather at Edwards Air Force Base in California's Mojave desert. Mary Cleave in mission control said a front expected to move through the base may leave rainwater on the normally-dry lake bed runways.

She said conditions were expected to be good for a landing Thursday — which is now the planned landing day — or Friday.

The six-man crew of the historic international expedition entered its second week at 9 a.m. MST. The astronauts are now in the constant daylight that will remain for the rest of the mission because of the pecularities of their orbit and Earth's position in relation to the sun.

The silicon experiment televised Monday night was a spectacular show for scientists watching the operation "live" in the science control center on the ground. The silicon glowed whitish-orange under 2,600-degree F. heat in the furnace as it melted in an attempt to grow near-perfect crystals in the weightless environment.

Among the discoveries from the flight so far was the discovery of methane more than 40 miles high, and carbon dioxide 78 miles high. Neither gas had been seen before at those altitudes.

The methane find was particularly important, said mission scientist Charles Chappell, because it provides new clues to the dispersion of atmospheric constituents. Methane is swamp gas produced by biological processes on Earth.

Chappell also said an X-ray scanner aboard Spacelab had found evidence of iron in a swirling disc of gas and dust around a distant apparent black hole known as Cygnus X-1. He said this material was coming from a nearby star "being slowly eaten by the black hole."

Party unified, sort of Democratic candidates appear to be on speaking terms, but squabbles emerged later

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Democratic presidential candidates launched a two-day nationwide "unity" fund-raising swing Monday, fighting among themselves and with party leaders over issues and the rules for picking 1984 delegates.

There was little unity in the effort as one candidate, Sen. Alan Cranston of California, boycotted the events to protest party rules, while another, civil rights leader Jesse Jackson, at first threatened to use them as a forum for his objections.

But after a brief telephone negotiation, Jackson agreed to meet later in the month with Democratic National Chairman Charles Manatt to work out the differences, rather than disrupt the fund-raising effort.

The distractions took some of the spotlight away from the two frontrunners, former Vice President Walter Mondale and Sen. John Glenn of Ohio, who were expected to spend two days fighting over who was the true Democrat in the field.

The fund-raising gala — aimed at raising $1.9 million of the $7 million the Democratic Party can legally spend on the presidential campaign next year — was scheduled to start with a $1,000-a-plate dinner in Washington.

The candidates then divide into two groups to swing north and south across the country.

Mondale, Sen. Ernest Hollings of South Carolina and former Sen. George McGovern of South Dakota will take the northern route, flying to Chicago for $500-a-person breakfast.

Jackson, Glenn and Sen. Gary Hart of Colorado will go to Atlanta for a $500-a-person breakfast and then to Houston for a $500-a-person lunch.

The two groups will meet in Albuquerque Tuesday night for a $1,000-a-person dinner.

Former Gov. Reubin Askew of Florida dropped out because of the death of his mother-in-law.

Jackson said earlier that party rules are unfair to minorities and women.

Jackson said the rule requiring a candidate get at least 20 percent of the vote to get any delegates discriminates against him because in only 86 congressional districts are more than 20 percent of the registered voters black.

In addition he said the new provision reserving 568 delegate seats for party leaders, including 164 House members, will result in that bloc being largely white and male.

Argentina's junta ends military rule

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (UPI) — The military junta that ruled Argentina for nearly eight years and presided over its crushing defeat in the Falkland Islands war disbanded Monday, the final step to a return to democracy.

The three-member junta, which became increasingly unpopular as the country's economic crunch worsened, dissolved itself in a secret ceremony and even discarded a plan to issue a nationwide broadcast detailing its accomplishments.

President-elect Raul Alfonsin will be inaugurated Saturday as Argentina's first democratically elected president in nearly a decade.

Army Gen. Cristino Nicolaides, Navy Adm. Ruben Franco and Air Force Gen. Augusto Hughes held the final junta meeting in Navy headquarters, doing away with a series of government statutes in place since the March 24, 1976, coup that brought the military to power.

The generals at that time overthrew President Maria Estela "Isabelita" Martinez de Peron, the widow of legendary dictator Juan Peron, and severely restricted political activity.

The elections were the country's first democratic vote in 10 years.

The actual proclamation of victory for Alfonsin and Vice President-elect Victor Martinez was delayed until Wednesday because electoral vote results from three provinces arrived late.

Supreme Court lets states tax multinationals

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court, rejecting pleas from 11 foreign nations, refused Monday to enter a multimillion-dollar dispute over how California taxes subsidiaries of foreign corporations operating in the state.

The decision leaves intact a "unitary tax" system, also used in Idaho, which takes into account the international profits of multinational firms instead of income generated in the state alone and generally means international firms pay more taxes in the state.

The court turned down an appeal by Shell Petroleum N.V. of the Netherlands who asked it to consider whether foreign nations may challenge the right of state tax officials to consider the worldwide profits of a foreign corporation in assessing taxes on a subsidiary doing business in the state.

The problem, which has drawn the ire of foreign-based multinational corporations, now is being studied by a presidential commission to determine if the state is interfering with international treaty obligations.

The justices spurned the arguments of nine Europeans nations, Japan and Canada by refusing to hear the dispute over California's tax methods. The U.S. government has not taken a position on the controversy.

Last term, the Supreme Court authorized the use of the unitary method to tax the income of U.S. corporations with subsidiaries overseas, but the question of using the method to tax foreign corporations is more difficult because of treaties signed with other governments.

Syrians will get U.S. flak jackets

NEW YORK (UPI) — The federal government has granted a West German company licenses to sell millions of dollars worth of bullet-proof vests to Syria made with U.S. material, Rep. Bill Green, R-N.Y., said Monday.

The West German firm, which Green's office refused to identify, had not yet shipped any of the military quality "flack vests" to the Mideast nation but was trying to make financial arrangements for a sale, said Hank Roden, a spokesman for Green said.

The announcement came a day after the Pentagon announced that Syrian missiles downed two U.S. bombers, killed one pilot and captured another.

Syria has also been backing Druze Moslems in Lebanon, and Syrian-backed forces were believed responsible for an assault Sunday that killed eight U.S. Marines and wounded two others.

The congressman said the U.S. Department of Commerce granted the West Germans two re-export licenses allowing nearly $10 million worth of a product called Kevlar, made by DuPont Co., to be used for vests made for sale to Syria.

DuPont's Kevlar Aramid Fiber, manufactured in Richmond, Va. and used for a variety of purposes, is the main protective element in the vests.

The Kevlar would be woven into a fabric and cut into flack jackets, Roden said. The number of vests that could be made from $10 million worth of Kevlar was unknown, he said.

A spokesman for the agency's International Trade Administration confirmed the licenses had been granted in March and July.

"When they were granted, there was nothing on the books," the Commerce spokesman, Dan Landa, said. "We are now scrutinizing licences for Syria in enormous detail and with great care."

Though he could not pinpoint when the agency's policy changed, Landa said it coincided with recent events in the Mideast.

Green wrote to Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige Monday urging him not to grant any extension or reapplication of the West German company's licenses.

Right-to-work didn't tip Stouffer decision

House Speaker Tom Stivers is entitled to his opinion, but we think he should have been less definitive last week when he said the lack of a state right-to-work law was one of the reasons Twin Falls lost the Stouffer Foods Corp. to Utah.

Stivers made the comment to about 100 of Idaho's business and political leaders at the Associated Taxpayers of Idaho annual conference.

He hedged slightly, saying the reason was only "in part," but he left the impression that he thought the lack of a right-to-work law was a significant reason Stouffer's picked Utah.

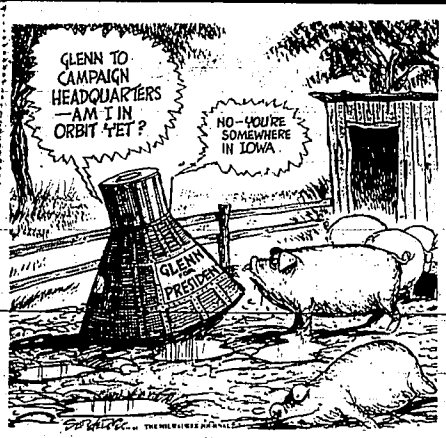
That doesn't square with the facts as we know them. No one in Twin Falls who was close to the Stouffer recruiting effort thinks the right-to-work issue was anything more than a minor point in the decision.

If Stivers knows differently, he should be willing to say where he got the information, which he declined to do in an interview following his talk.

Right-to-work has been an issue in Idaho for years; Stivers has supported it time and again, only to see it die from vetos.

He is entitled to his opinion on how valuable a right-to-work law would be as an industrial recruiting tool. How much, however, is debatable, considering that Idaho already has the fourth best business climate of government-controlled factors in the United States.

To the best of our knowledge, Stivers was not directly involved in Twin Falls' recruiting effort of Stouffer's. Unless he knows something about that effort that the people close to it don't, he should not pass off his own opinions as facts on why the firm went elsewhere.



Cabbage Kids: Computer individuality

BOSTON — So it appears that the biggest Christmas hit of 1983 hasn't come from the North Pole at all, but from a plastic cabbage patch.

It wasn't even designed by elves, but by computers.

From all reports, the Cabbage Patch Kids are the greatest sensation since E.T., which was the greatest sensation since Barbie, which was the greatest sensation since the Shirley Temple doll. But this time the laws of supply and demand have been hyped to new heights.

The advertising for this one-of-a-kind 18-inch doll complete with adoption papers and, Lord Help Us, a parenting booklet, created a frenzy. The short supply turned that frenzy into the mass hysteria we normally see when starving mobs happen upon a truck full of cabbages, not Cabbage Kids.

From notes collected by our far-flung correspondents on the consuming front lines, there is evidence of one broken leg, assorted minor injuries from elbows and knees, and a thriving black market. One store manager has armed himself against the hordes with a baseball bat, another temporarily fired employees who tried to save the Kids for themselves, and a third finally gave his allotment away to a hospital pediatric ward.

The Cabbage Patch Kids phenomenon is well beyond the normal Christmas crazies. In a way, the pressure to get one of these dolls is a bizarre replica of the real-life demand for the small supply of adoptable babies.

It has prompted instant and terminally serious reactions from adoption workers, birth parent groups and the pop psychologists who make their living analyzing hula-hoops and finding the hidden meaning in Pac-people.

I am not sure that the Cabbage Kids fad means anything much except that advertising works. The doll itself has a kind of squishy, cutesy ugliness. Blessedly, it doesn't do anything, and has no batteries. It's a welcome relief from the biological dolls of a few years ago which performed every bodily function short of childbirth.

But what intrigues me about the Cabbage Patch Kids is that each comes with an illusion as well as an adoption paper. It carries into our homes the thoroughly modern illusion of mass-produced uniqueness.

The whole gimmick of these dolls is that each one is bit different, just like real babies or snowflakes. This is the first doll programmed by a computer to be different. Just wrap your mind around that idea: programmed individuality. There are now multiple combinations of eyes, hair, skin, clothes and names. No kid will find that his or her "kid" is just like the others.

Now I don't know about the rest of you, but I have seen this individuality gambit somewhere before. Last year, there was a perfume that was guaranteed to smell different on different people.

Ellen Goodman

No longer would we have to risk the social gaffe of walking into the party with somebody else's aroma on. There is also the Burger King ad which continually entices us with the idea that we can have it our way. "It," however, remains their production-line burger, no matter what you put on it.

This year, I am told, the perennial monogram has become a hot sales item. Mass-produced sweaters, socks and sweatshirts, are being personalized in larger and larger numbers by computer-programmed machinery with our very own initials. They're doing it our way their way.

All this is a bit like the caring special service promised by the bankers who know us only by our account number and by an airline attendant who knows us only by our seat number. But there is something even weirder in a computerized, mass-produced personal touch.

I suppose it's all the result of living in a large hi-tech society which places a premium on individuality. How do you reconcile those two realities? Manufacturers have to sell massive amounts of their products to one buyer at a time. Almost by necessity they end up selling us personalized conformity, in cars or cakes or Cabbage Patch Kids. And we line up for it.

I don't think this is evil. These genetically engineered dolls are better than clone dolls, such as Barbie. The Cabbage Patch Kids are pretty engaging, although I wouldn't break a leg for one. But the fad is a decent fake. It's part of the phony individuality that passes for the real thing.

And, Christmas or no Christmas, that's just not an idea I'm longing to adopt.

Ellen Goodman writes for The Boston Globe.

Minor impact from movie, TV show

WASHINGTON — One of the common errors and major sins of we the media is to underestimate the intelligence of our audiences. There were some recent sigths that we have been at it again.

This time the underestimation took the form of entertaining the notion that the public can't tell the difference between reality and fantasy. Specifically, this had to do with two motion pictures, "The Right Stuff" and "The Day After."

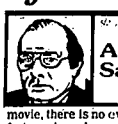
The first of these flicks was a bottom-busting three-hour saga of the hot pilots who led the United States into the space age. Because John Glenn was one of the astronauts depicted in the movie, somebody (in a public relations firm, odds are) the theory that "The Right Stuff" was somehow going to give the Ohio senator's presidential campaign a great boost.

The second was the ABC made-for-television film depicting the consequences on a small town in Kansas of a nuclear attack on the United States. The proposition advanced for this film was that it would cause a massive shift of public opinion toward the idea of a nuclear weapons freeze.

About a month after the release of the astronaut movie, there is no evidence that Glenn's political fortunes have been affected one way or the other. As has been said, those who went to the theater believing Glenn was a prissy, uptight twerp probably came away with the same impression; those who viewed him as a heroic figure going in left with their opinion intact.

As for "The Day After," the idea that the film would have anti-nuclear forces marching in the streets seems to be just another fevered construct of some flack trying to hype its ratings.

But this idea had gained such currency by the time the movie was shown that the White House served up Secretary of State George Shultz for a televised discussion to knock down any dangerous pacifism that might have been generated by the show. We are told that the administration originally wanted Vice President George Bush to do this job, but he turned it down.



Arnold Sawislak

There are some who say if the movie did anything, it may have persuaded some viewers that nuclear holocaust isn't all that bad. According to some experts, the film, for reasons of taste, presented a sugar-coated version of what would happen to the survivors in such a situation.

Many in the audience probably identified more with the people in the story who survived the attack and its aftermath rather than with those who were atomized or afflicted with radiation disease. One cartoon after the showing pictured a youngster standing beside the TV set saying, "If there ever is a real nuclear attack, I'll just change the channel."

In any case, the media — print as well as electronic — went enthusiastically along with the hype that said both "The Right Stuff" and "The Day After," would have significant public impact and once again ended up with nothing of the sort to report.

Freedom of choice denied

It is shameful Sen. Mark Ricks is threatening the PBS. The power of public office should never be used for personal vendetta. The public has the right to know and apparently they want to know the truth behind the LDS Church.

Almost every time the film "The Godmakers" has been shown the church sponsoring it has been full to overflowing. Anything that generates that kind of interest is newsworthy. No one, including you senator, has demonstrated or even protested that the film was anything but totally honest and accurate in its presentation of LDS Church doctrine.

Why is the truth made public such a threat to the Mormon Church and its believers? Why does it matter to you Sen. Ricks, that I know what your true beliefs are?

I'm thankful Jack Schaefle is managing the PBS and not you senator! Apparently you do not believe in the free exchange of ideas, but do believe in the oppression of public debate when you feel personally threatened.

The issue here is not freedom of religion. No one is advocating hatred, persecution or intolerance toward the LDS Church or its people. The issues clearly stated and demonstrated in the film "The Godmakers" are the deceitful methods employed to recruit new members and the pressure exerted on current members to remain LDS. The film would never have been made if the LDS church had not attempted to disguise itself as just another Protestant religion which it clearly is not.

The LDS have developed a vocabulary of their own and applied the art of semantics to their indoctrination. That is the LDS use words describing their concepts that mean one thing to traditional Judaeo-Christian concepts of God and mean and another thing to believers of Mormonism. So clear has been their purposeful use of this art that thousands of non-Mormons have been duped by their designs naively accepting LDS doctrines at their word, without investigating those doctrines simply because they sound traditional. To deliberately continue using traditional religious terminology while presenting non-traditional religious views is fraud at best and denies the potential new member true freedom of choice.

Help lack started decline

It has been brought to my attention that people in different localities are affected differently with our predators and wildlife, but I truly believe that basically we are all affected similarly through the years.

Regardless, it is not necessary to destroy them on one pretext or another.

I was encouraged when one of our sheepmen, who is one of the top producers in the state of Idaho made the following statement, "The problem getting help started the decline in sheep numbers in my opinion — not predation as many think. Good competent help kept the predators away from the herds." A belief I've had for many years.

One of our retiring BLM directors also stated "Public lands are a legacy which was left to all the people, not just a select few, but a select few have kind of helped themselves to their use." He also confirmed that sagebrush and juniper have been uprooted, food for our deer and elk, and dragged from the ground by tractors, to plant grasses, which our wildlife cannot reach in our snows and ice.

I realize elk, deer etc. must be controlled by hunts, however, I agree with Mr. Etter that having hunts when the game, including our bird populations, have been practically wiped out with our severe winters and starvation, is going a little far. If our Fish and Game Departments don't wish to feed and care for our wildlife, what do they do with all the hunting fees they collect. Whatever they are doing with it, they can't seem to do without it, so scarce wildlife is further depleted by more hunting. This should not happen, the wildlife should have closed seasons and be allowed to reproduce to increase their numbers. The "Raping of the Rangelends" by our stockmen have certainly helped this situation. Now we have the return of the use of poison 1080 on our public lands to contend with.

Mr. Harrop, I hope you can give an unbiased opinion on our wildlife in your Outdoor articles, when as a stockman, your bread an butter is affected.

Weknow why Watt gone

This means he still isn't especially offended by any slur so long as it isn't aimed at the rich, white male establishment in which he has isolated himself.

He is gone Mr. President, because of a narrow heart. We understand this, can you?

Classical music preferred

This is a letter I've been meaning to write ever since my return to the Magic Valley. Actually it's more a questionnaire than a letter.

1. How many of you folks out there would like to hear classical music on your radio?
2. Would you support the sponsor or sponsors of a classical format?
3. Are there any businesses out there that would be interested in sponsoring such a format?
4. Is there a station here in the valley that would like to sell the time?
5. How many would like to hear the Saturday broadcasts from the "Met"?
6. If your response if favorable, list some of your special interests — composers, opera, orchestral, mucisal comedy etc. — or a stewpot filled with many of the greatest musical ingredients?
7. Whatever your views, pro, con or indifferent, please send your thought to me.

Hey! It's worth a try, isn't it?

Lamp of freedom menaced

The TV movie, "The Day After" received praise from so-called diverse observers like Willima F. Buckley, George Schultz, Henry Kissinger and Robert S. McNamara. All these "diverse" opinions come from men who all are members of the Council on Foreign Relations. Buckley, a phoney conservative, recently ran an ad in his "National Review" magazine for the CFR publication, "Foreign Affairs." Schultz is the tenth Secretary of State in a row to be a member of the CFR. Kissinger and McNamara are also on the Executive Committee of the Trilateral Commission.

A brief history of the CFR and the Trilateral Commission will reveal why these men praised the movie in an effort to gain support for the nuclear freeze movement which is designed to unilaterally disarm America.

The CFR was conceived by a Marxist, Edward Mandell House, chief advisor to President Woodrow Wilson, for the purpose of creating a one-world government by destroying the freedom and independence of all nations, especially the U.S. and lead our nation into a world government. In his book, "Philip Dru: Administrator," House laid out a fictionalized plan for the conquest of America. He told of a "conspiracy" (the word is his) which would gain control of both the Democratic and Republican parties, and use them as instruments in the creation of a socialistic world government. House said he was working for "socialism as dreamed of by Karl Marx." The CFR chairman is David Rockefeller.

The Trilateral Commission was conceived by Zbigniew Brzezinski, who praises Marxism, who thinks the United States is becoming obsolete, and who also wants to create a one-world government. The literature of the Trilateral Commission states, exactly as Brzezinski's book, "Between Two Ages," had proposed, that the more advanced communist states could become partners in the alliance leading to world government. Its founder and driving force is also David Rockefeller. Both organizations exercise immense control over our government and much of American life.

The effects of the CFR and the Trilateral Commission on the affairs of our nation is easy to see. Why does the U.S. continue to keep Communism alive with money and technology? In short, our government had become pro-communist.

These organizations and their conspiratorial goals must be exposed before the lamp of freedom goes out throughout the world and is replaced by a dictatorial communist-style world government. It will happen if we don't stop it.

Panel pans school cuts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Poor and minority students came up losers in the first school year under President Reagan's new block grant approach to financing education, a House investigative committee reported Monday.

The report by the House Government Operations Committee was based on the 1982-83 school year, the first under Reagan's "New Federalism"-style program in which federal education grants were cut, consolidated and given to the states for distribution.

Budget cuts alone eliminated more than 140,000 students from programs for low-income, educationally deprived children, many of whom are minorities, the report concluded.

In addition, less money was dedicated to help low-income elementary and high school students most in need of extra instructional help as states used their new spending power to shift the use of federal dollars, the report said.

"Our findings indicate that the effort of this administration to reduce the federal role in education is being executed at the expense of America's neediest children," concluded Rep. Ted Weiss, D-N.Y., chairman of the subcommittee that investigated the effects of block grants on education.

However, his views were not shared by the majority of Republicans on the Democratic-dominated committee.

Supreme Court to decide draft issue

By ELIZABETH OLSON
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Cott agreed Monday to decide whether the government may deny federal education aid to young men who fail to register for the draft.

The Selective Service System wantsthe high court to overturn a federal court ruling that the law is unconstitutional because it punishes yung men for past wrongdoing and forces them to incriminate themselves.

Also Monday, Harrison Williams — he only senator convicted in the FBI's Abscam crruption "sting" — lost his latest Supreme Court bt to stay out of jail.

The justices, in a one-line order rejected Williams' arguments that the jury errd when it found he was willing to commit a crime een before agents proposed it.

The Supreme Court also has rejected ppeals by five House members of their convctions in Abscam, where FBI agents posed as representatives of wealthy Arabs willing to pay bribes for congressional influence.

William's lawyer's office indicated the New Jersey Democrat would not ask the high court to reconsider, clearing the way for Williams, 63, to start serving his three-year sentence within a month.

In other actions, the justices:

• Agreed to decide if a Missouri man committed a crime by tricking the FBI and the Secret Service into tracking down his estranged wife by saying she had disappeared.

• Said they will rule whether federal law requires school districts to provide handicapped children with necessary medical treatment.

• Accepted for argument the case of a North Carolina man convicted of murder, who maintains he was wrongly forced to prove he bore no malice towards his wife when he stabbed her to death in 1969.

The Selective Service estimates that 100,000 men face loss of federal aid for failing to register for the draft under the new law that took effect July 1.

The high court gave a possible signal of the outcome of the draft case last June when it acted to let the law take effect as scheduled. Without dissent, the justices set aside a Minnesota judge's injunction derailing the statute. A final ruling is expected by next July.

The law says any draft-age young man seeking for federal student aid must sign a statement saying he has registered, or lose eligibility for aid, including loans, grants and work assistance.

Six anonymous Minnesota students, in danger of losing federal support for graduate work, said the law violates their Fifth Amendment right against self-incrimination.

U.S. District Judge Donald Alsop in St. Paul agreed. He also said the law amounts to a "bill of attainder" — specifically outlawed by the Constitution — by singling out unregistered students and punishing them "based on past conduct."

Picketer hit, killed by bus

ZANESVILLE, Ohio (UPI) — A striking Greyhound employee was struck and killed Monday at a picket site by a bus driven by one of the trainees hired to replace striking drivers, authorities said.

The victim, believed to be from Cleveland, was killed as the trainees left a motel parking lot in downtown Zanesville en route to a training session.

About 100 striking Greyhound workers have picketed against the training at the motel for about a week.

Some scuffling broke out among protesters, trainees and the police immediately after the accident, police said.

A Muskingum County Sheriff's deputy confirmed the victim was one of the striking pickets at the site, but the sheriff's office refused to release any other details of the accident, including the victim's name or whether the trainee was arrested.

Muskingum County Coroner Dr. Edmund Booth told CBS the victim leaped on the bus as it headed out of the lot and tried to rip off a rear view mirror when he fell and rolled under the wheels.

But several of the picketers claimed the victim was hit as he was crossing the street legally.

The picketing Greyhound employees were from as far away as Pittsburgh and Cleveland.

"What the hell are they doing, are they giving Greyhound the right to kill?," said Clark. "I'm really upset. This is ridiculous."

The trouble at the training area was reported last week. On Friday, 60 deputies in full riot gear and with dogs to clear a path for five Greyhound buses through the picket line at the motel parking lot.

Daily Horoscope

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The morning will find you in a contentious frame of mind so use self control. Make long-term plans for gaining the respect of those in power. Handle business matters well.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Don't argue with superiors. Be precise in handling business matters. Drive carefully to avoid a possible accident.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Get ahead by being with partners who understand your ideas. Be logical about success, and take one step at a time.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Communicate well with business people who interest you. Cooperate with co-worker. Avoid arguments at home tonight.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21) Be congenial today. Accomplish good deal by avoiding opposition. Take time for fun in the evening.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21) Steer clear of a co-worker who wants to argue. Listen to advice of higher-ups. Don't lose your temper with anyone.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't permit a money matter to upset you this morning. Learn to economize. Be more practical from now on.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Try to get along better with kin. Arrange it so that you work less and make more money. Entertain at home.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Avoid worrisome enemy, but join in plans of those about you. Take time to visit with persons who can help you. Take it easy tonight.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Find best way to avoid contention with a good pal. Plan action that can lead to greater success. Be happy at home.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Refrain from arguments with a higher-up. You can practically double your present benefits. Avoid one who dislikes you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't permit a newcomer to criticize you. Go to a good advisor for problems. Make sure you have the right facts and figures.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Avoid arguments with persons in business. Use new ideas wisely. A social evening can be very nice.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY, he or she will be someone who has to be taught early to deal more harmoniously with people, but upon maturity, such an attitude will achieve success in business. Prepare for education. Have many good books around for early perusal.

TEXAS-BOUND

Clint Eastwood and Sondra Locke are expected in Houston the night of Dec. 8 for the world premiere of their new movie, "Sudden Impact." The movie, also directed and produced by Eastwood, is his fourth as tough-guy San Francisco cop Harry Callahan, whom he introduced in "Dirty Harry." The premiere and party (at the home of socialite Carolyn Farb) will benefit the American Paralysis Association, on whose board Eastwood serves.

AGE DIFFERENCE

Barbara Grant, 33, at first worried about the 46-year age difference between herself and husband Cary Grant. Now she has learned to take things as they come. The couple lives in Los Angeles. Mrs. Grant sews, including caftans for her husband, and cooks huge English breakfasts. She told People magazine one advantage of her marriage: "We don't argue over ridiculous things. We appreciate each other more than a younger couple beause time is so precious."

LONG TRAINING

Elise du Pont, wife of Delaware Gov. Pierre du Pont IV, plans to run for Congress next year, hoping to win the state's only House seat. Her husband held it for three terms before his 1974 election as governor. Mrs. du Pont, an assistant administrator in the Reagan administration's Agency for International Development, said, "I know Washington and I know the job. I served one the longest internships ever, being married to a former member of Congress."

BRING BOB BACK

Nearly 200 demonstrators brandished placards demanding "Put Bob back on the job" and "Animal experiments must end" in front of KABC radio in Los Angeles last weekend to denounce the firing of Bob Barker. Barker, host of TV's "The Price is Right," also hosted a 15-minute segment on KABC. He was fired last month for his on-the-air "crucading zeal" against animal experimentation. The demonstators, representing six animal rights groups, claim Barker's firing was an act of censorship after pressure from animal experimenters.

VECHERINKA

There will be a gala "Vecherinka" Thursday at New York's Sotheby Parke Bernet — an evening of Russian art, music, buffet supper and vodka — to benefit the American Society for the Preservation of Russian Monuments and Culture and a Russian-English high school. The event will be held under the patronage of Prince and Princess Alexander Romanoff, Prince and Princess Nikita Romanoff, Mr. and Mrs. William Beadleston and Dr. Arcadi Nebolsine.

BALLROOM DANCE

Juliet Prowse and John Monte will host a 90-minute PBS telecast of the 1983 U.S. Ballroom Grand Championships, taped live last September, on Dec. 7.

Cancer patient to get a Cabbage Patch doll

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — A department store clerk planning to sell four Cabbage Patch dolls to the highest bidders has changed his mind and will give one of them to a cancer-stricken girl and perhaps use the others to raise money for real orphans.

Jeffery Evans, 23, has been hoarding the four dolls for one week, accepting bids from telephone callers who heard about him on a radio show.

Evans said Monday he will give one to Pamela Hamilton, 12, a La Follette, Tenn., girl under court orders to take chemotherapy treatments even though she and her parents believe only God can cure her cancer.

"I don't really know if she wants one," Evans said. "I think I will give her the one I like the best — the one with the pacifier. It's name is Carmella Emmie."

Evans last week bought four Cabbage Patch kids, complete with adoption papers and disposable diapers and planned to hold them hostage for money until Dec. 15.

"I'm sort of mad about how people are acting about these dolls," he said. "It's a long way away from the real meaning of Christmas."

He's been offered a color television set for one doll. The rest of the offerings were money — from $25 to $75.

"One lady asked me to call her back after all the bids were in, I guess so she could try to outbid them."

Evans said he may raffle the dolls off "to raise money for true orphans' Christmas."

"What about all the real orphans — I wonder if they see all of this and wish they were dolls so that someone would adopt them?

"The whole thing started to bum me out. I'd like to find a way to use them to make money for real orphans. I'd rather see the energy directed for real orphans instead of a bunch of dolls," said Evans.

"I guess this is my chance to do good," he said.

ACLU takes issue with year of Bible

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — President Reagan's proclamation of 1983 as the "Year of the Bible" offends all non-Christian Americans and should be declared unconstitutional, an American Civil Liberties Union attorney argued Monday.

A Justice Department attorney insisted the proclamation did not violate the separation of church and state, describing it as a non-binding "patriotic appeal to the American people."

U.S. District Judge Manuel Real took the suit under submission following the hour-long hearing, and did not indicate whether he would rule before the end of the year.

ACLU attorney Gilbert Gaynor argued that the proclamation, also approved by Congress, was an "endorsement of the Bible as the Word of God (that) offends every non-Christian religion."

He argued that it stamps Christianity as the official religion of the land and therefore causes harm to 16 individual plaintiffs — including four Christian clergy who are seeking to build inter-faith dialogue.

But Justice Department attorney Christine Jones claimed the proclamation chiefly refers to the Bible's influence in forming the values under which the country was founded.

She said the proclamation "merely recognizes the input of the Bible" and does not require anyone to do anything.

Miss Jones also urged Real to not make a premature ruling in the case, arguing it would become moot at the end of the year.

Gaynor disagreed and explained, "It doesn't mean that at the end of the year — when the clock strikes 12 on Dec. 31 — the proclamation will not still be in the federal record."

Real suggested that Gaynor had failed to cite a law violated by the proclamation, but the attorney replied that it "impermissibly advanced" the Bible and therefore violated the Constitution by endorsing the scriptures of one religion over others.

Fire kills six retarded

CINCINNATI (UPI) — A fire raged through a group home for the mentally retarded Monday, killing six residents and injuring five others, and Fire Chief Norm Wells criticized neighbors for not calling the fire department sooner.

Wells said firefighters might have saved all six victims had someone called the fire department sooner. He said neighbors had spotted the fire 15 minutes before firefighters were notified.

"That's 15 less minutes they had to survive," said Wells. "There is a good possibility we could have got in there and got all of them out had we been there when the fire was first seen. It gave the fire 15 minutes headway on us."

He also said the home should have had a sprinkler system, though none was required by law.

The cause of the fire was not immediately determined, but Wells said it did not appear to be arson.

Flynt disrupts court again

Flynt, a paraplegic, was wheeled into the courtroom of U.S Magistrate Olga Jurco. The magazine publisher flung the flag at the bench and waged a verbal attack on the justice system, demanding freedom of speech.

The judge ordered Flynt removed from the courtroom until he could calm himself. Flynt later re-entered the hearing, appearing much calmer, and apologized for the outburst.

The purpose of the hearing was to establish Flint's identity after he refused to do so during earlier court proceedings on charges that he jumped bond by leaving Los Angeles.

Famed skydiver breaks own rule, dies

By PENNY SPAR
United Press International

DAVIS, Calif. — George Morar, one of America's best-known parachutists, fell 3,000 feet to his death in a muddy field because he broke his own rule for handling an emergency, an employee at his skydiving school said Monday.

Morar, 59, a highly decorated retired Air Force master sergeant who made his first parachute jump in the Korean War, was killed Sunday a few miles from his skydiving school.

He had jumped nearly 3,000 times in 20 years and had instructed more than 75,000 people.

"He was one of the true pioneers of the sport," said Paul Sitter, of the U.S. Parachute Association.

Morar and three other skydivers leaped from the plane after his reserve chute opened while he was inside the aircraft and he failed to bring it back inside the plane.

The errant chute caused the plane to dive and the skydivers jumped on the orders of the pilot to prevent a crash.

"I haven't the faintest idea what he was thinking about," Allan Geoffroy, manager of Morar's skydiving school, said. "He knows it was ridiculous to try to pull it back into the aircraft.

"If a chute goes out the door, you follow it," he said. "That's recommended safety procedure."

Geoffroy said he spoke with the other three divers and the pilot after the accident.

Possibly adding to the tragedy, Geoffroy said, was the belief among Morar and the other skydivers that if was Morar's main parachute that had opened — not his reserve.

Geoffroy said Morar and the others were going to 10,000 feet for a routine "fun jump" in the Sacramento Valley.

As Morar shifted position, the reserve parachute was released.

Larry Netz, one of the divers aboard the plane, said, "I saw the chute flash out the door just as George was turning to point something out on the ground.

"I grabbed at George to shove him out, but he stopped me," Netz said. "He said, 'No, wait, grab the lines.' I figured he knew what he was doing so I started pulling on lines, but it didn't do any good. The chute was just partially opened and was wrapped around the elevator in the tail section."

Thinking it was the main chute that was causing the problem, someone had released the controls for Morar's main chute.

Netz said that "meant that he no longer had his main chute attached, just the emergency chute, which was wrapped around the tail and flapping against the plane."

"George was the last to jump," Netz said. "I guess he stayed with it as long as he could, trying to pull the lines free."

Reagan declares 'war to end' on mob crime

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, boasting about a decline in street crime during his administration, Monday declared, "It's war to the end" against organized crime.

He told federal prosecutors gathered at the White House that despite "some people" saying government never can eliminate human impulses leading to organized crime, "I've always believed that government can break up the networks of tightly organized regional and national syndicates that make up organized crime.

"So I repeat, we're in this thing to win. There will be no negotiated settlements, no detente with the mob. It's war to the end where they're concerned. Our goal is simple. We mean to cripple their organization, dry up their profits and put their members behind bars where they belong. They've had a free run for too long a time in this country."

The 94 U.S. attorneys attending their first conference where all members were Reagan appointees gave him sustained applause.

Reagan last summer appointed a commission to investigate organized crime.

Although its executive director resigned in a dispute with the chairman, U.S. appeals court judge Irving Kaufman, while another member, San Diego Sheriff Peter Duffy, resigned because of allegations he did not aggressively pursue crime figures, the panel held its first hearings last week.

Reagan said organized crime convictions have increased from 515 in 1981 to 1,331 in 1983.

Just before he appointed the commission in July, Reagan addressed the International Longshoremen's Association in Florida, a union with documented ties to organized crime, and praised its leader, Teddy Gleason, as a man of integrity.

The ILA, along with the Teamsters Union, led for many years by officials with actual or reputed associations with crime syndicates, have been among Reagan's most solid union supporters.

The FBI said in October the number of crimes reported to police dropped 5 percent in the first six months of this year, a statistic criminologists attribute to the aging of the "baby boom" generation.

Reagan, however, told the U.S. attorneys that lower crime rates have nothing to do with a decrease in the population of younger men who commit most of the street crime.

Free cheese stuck

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Tons of free cheese, flour and instant dry milk will be distributed this week in Magic Valley by the South Central Community Action Agency.

Because of the winter weather, however, distributions in Buhl, Hagerman, Rupert and Burley have been postponed. Community Action officials were unable to truck the food from Twin Falls to the outlying areas, so the distributions will be delayed until driving conditions improve, says Carrol Cliett, the agency's services coordinator.

The commodities set aside for these areas will not be allocated at the other distribution sites; they will be saved for later distribution, she says. The times and dates will be announced next week.

According to Cliett, 34,000 pounds of cheese, 38,300 pounds of flour and 26,400 pounds of milk from the U.S. Agriculture Department will be handed out to those families who are eligible, under federal income guidelines.

The regulations are: for a single-person household, monthly income must not exceed $527; for two persons, $709; for three, $891; for four, $1,073; for five, $1,255; for six, $1,437; for seven, $1,619; and for eight, $1,801. For households with more than eight members, add $182 for each additional person.

Individuals with a commodity certification card will not have to show proof of income when applying for the food. Otherwise, verification of income for at least the previous month will be required, Cliett says.

If found eligible, an applicant will receive the commodities on the spot. For example, a senior citizen living alone would receive a five-pound block of cheese, a five-pound bag of flour and a four-pound box of milk, which have a retail value of about $30 retail, Cliett says.

The amount of items allotted will depend on the number of persons in the household.

Stivers isn't right

Dolton claims

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — House Speaker Tom Stivers overstated the effect that not having a right-to-work law in Idaho had on a decision to not build a major food-processing plant in Twin Falls, says the area's chief recruiter.

Mike Dolton, the executive director of the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce, said Monday that right-to-work legislation played virtually no part in a decision by the Stouffer Foods Co., a division of the Swiss-based Nestle's, to locate its new plant in Springville, Utah, instead of Twin Falls.

"That wasn't at all what lost it for us. The right-to-work question was only asked once, and it was asked as a standard question," Dolton said of his interviews with Stouffer officials.

But Stivers told the annual conference of the Associated Taxpayers of Idaho last week that, "We have . . . had a recent experience in the state where we lost a new industry to a neighboring state, due, in part, to the fact that we didn't have a right-to-work law which . . . has been passed repeatedly and is stopped by a veto."

After his speech to the conference, Stivers identified the industry as Stouffer's.

Stivers, a Twin Falls Republican, said Monday that he did not know to what extent the lack of right-to-work legislation influenced the decision to locate the plant in Utah. He did say, however, that a source in Boise told him it was a reason for the firm choosing the Utah site.

"It might have been a minute reason," Dolton said. But, he added, "It was flat industrial 'welfare' that lured Stouffer's away from us."

Dolton said a right-to-work law "certainly would help our industrial recruitment. It wouldn't help us as much as industrial revenue-bond legislation did."

Jay Engstrom, an economic development specialist with the governor's Division of Economic and Community Affairs, said Monday that neither Idaho's unionization rate nor its attractiveness to manufacturers has

City approves church school, condos

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Twin Falls City Council has taken final action on two developments that have been on the agenda for several months.

Monday night, the council amended a special-use permit it granted Nov. 7, to allow the Christian Center to begin construction of a parochial school and worship complex off Eastland Drive.

And council members approved a zoning change that clears the way for real-estate agent George Haney and builder Les Charlton to break ground on a 28-unit condominium project, off Elm Street and Heyburn Avenue.

The amended Christian Center permit apparently will be the final compromise between the non-denominational church, which currently operates its school off Morrison Street, and a group of neighbors who have pressured the city for changes in the project for several months.

Over time, the center intends to construct a sanctuary and elementary and secondary schools on land at the southwest corner of Eastland and Julie Lane. The elementary school will be the first phase of the development.

Saying the school would cause more noise than the worship building, the neighbors succeeded in obtaining a council vote on Nov. 7 that forced the church to switch the proposed locations of the two buildings.

At that same meeting, the council approved the church's request for a permit to begin construction.

But several problems and contradictions surfaced in that permit that necessitated further consideration of it.

Engineer Gerald Martens, speaking for church representatives who were not in attendance at Monday night's meeting, said the permit should have contained provisions for a proposed day-care center.

Council members, however, unanimously adopted a motion, saying this was not contained in the original wording of the permit application and will have to be considered through a new round of public hearings in front of the city Planning and Zoning Commission.

The council, however, refused to insert other wording that was requested by the neighbors. This would have spelled out the type of landscaping and fencing required between the church and the neighbors' subdivision.

After the meeting, Mark Stubbs, one of the neighbors, said he was pleased. The neighbors didn't get everything, but they succeeded in altering the layout of the project substantially to their satisfaction, he said.

Martens said the church would like to start construction of the school in February.

The condominium project will fill an irregularly shaped piece of land behind Burger King, Skippers and several other businesses along Blue Lakes Boulevard.

The developers came to the council seeking a

By The Times-News

TWIN FALLS — Snowplows from area highway districts have been working overtime trying to make sure that Magic Valley drivers can tell the roads from the ditches.

But it hasn't been easy, says Clarence Miller of the Jerome Highway District.

"We plowed all weekend and never gained a thing," he said Monday. At one time, three of his eight plows were stuck.

High winds whipped the snow off fields back on the roads, often piling it up into drifts. Moving the snow was no easy chore. Plow drivers found that the snow was not rolling with the plows as normal. It had to be pushed around.

It took until 4:40 p.m. Monday for state highway crews to clear their last obstacles, which were on U.S. 30, west of Buhl, a state dispatcher said.

Some districts also ran into equipment problems. After a couple days of hard work, the Gooding Highway District reported Monday that two of its four vehicles were out of commission temporarily — with half of the district to finish and more snow falling, superintendent Dean Sabala said.

The biggest blockades were on the north-south routes, highway personnel from throughout the Magic Valley said.

"We're going to have the majority of the north-south roads open (by this morning), but there probably will still be some that won't be travelable," said Floyd Dayley, the Twin Falls Highway District superintendent.

As in other districts, plows spent part of the day escorting milk trucks in and out of farms and freeing up lanes for emergency trips. One woman, who lives southwest of Twin Falls, had to be plowed out to go to the hospital for dialysis treatment, Dayley said.

Magic Valley Regional Medical Center reported at least three heart attacks from snow-shoveling and many snow-related injuries from falls throughout the weekend, said Randy Hudspeth, the critical-care director.

At the same time, people with minor ailments were staying at home, he said.

"The country people seemed to be loading up quite a bit on Saturday. On Sunday, it was the town people walking in," said owner Kenneth Daw, who was happy to see new supplies arrive on Monday.

At Person's IGA, manager Dale Ford also reported heavy purchases of staples, and a few other items. "Kitty litter is going like crazy — salt, too."

Kerry Osborne, the manager at Smith's Food King in Buhl, said baking goods were disappearing from his shelves quite quickly.

Drivers also suddenly wanted to winterize their autos, said Jeff Jackson, the assistant manager of Big O Tires in Twin Falls. In his tire shop, "we're averaging about seven minutes a car today," he said.

Big O and other stores were out of Skills, care make winter driving easier

BOISE — You've probably heard all this before.

But "it seems every winter, there are many motorists caught unprepared for the first snowfall," says Col. Calvin Bernard, the superintendent of the Idaho State Police.

So, before brushing the snow off your windshield and turning the key in your car's ignition, the ISP hopes you'll brush up on some winter driving skills.

They could save your life or, at least, your car.

First, prepare your vehicle with adequate tires and chains, and check the battery, wipers, anti-freeze and other essentials. Then, pack the trunk with winter survival gear in case you're stuck or stranded. A shovel, emergency lighting, blanket, tow chain or strap, and some sand are basic equipment, Bernard says.

Next, prepare your mind. "Summer roads are sometimes forgiving of a driver's mistakes and poor judgment . . . while winter roads are not," he says.

Here are a few hints:

• Slow down. Excessive speed is the top cause of winter accidents.

• Stay far behind the vehicle in front of you. Icy or wet roads increase stopping distances greatly, whether you're driving a passenger car or a four-wheel-drive vehicle.

• Expect the unexpected. Always leave yourself an "out."

• Clear the snow off the windows, as well as the headlights and taillights. • Use gears, not brakes, if possible. Lower gears allow better control on snow.

• In a skid, ease off the gas and turn the wheels in the direction of the skid. Stomping on the brakes will worsen the skid.

• Wear seatbelts. Seatbelts offer the best protection in an accident, officials say.

• Drive with courtesy. You may have the right of way, but insisting on it sometimes can leave you "dead-wrong," Bernard says.

Hailey pool plan draws fire

By DAVE LEWIS
Times-News writer

Wood River Valley

HAILEY — A group of residents are protesting the location of a county swimming pool in a Hailey subdivision.

Some 25 residents of the Hiawatha and Deerfield subdivisions, in the east side of Hailey, are making the protest because they think it will have an adverse impact on their neighborhoods.

Doug Robens, a Deerfield resident who heads the group, says the citizens will seek an injunction against the Blaine County Recreation District to keep it from building the pool.

The city of Hailey agreed last month to allow the recreation district to build the pool on the site, to keep the district from losing a $131,000 grant to help build the pool.

The recreation district originally had planned to build the pool adjacent to the Wood River High School, on land donated by the city. However, that site became unavailable when a title search revealed the city did not own the property.

The grant, from the federal Land and Water Conservation fund, requires that the ground be broken for the project by the end of 1983 in order for the district to receive the funds.

When it became obvious the recreation district could not gain title to the land, it asked the city to allow the pool on the Deerfield park land, which had been donated to the city by the subdivision's developers.

During a special meeting, the city Planning and Zoning Commission recommended that the city give the land to the district, and the Hailey City Council agreed to do so. No public hearing on the issue was held.

Now, to clear up a possible legal question on the city's action, the council will hold public hearing on Dec. 23 to consider the matter. The zoning commission also has agreed to meet informally with the citizens group tonight to hear its side of the story.

Robens says the group does not want the pool on the Deerfield site because of the traffic the pool would generate and because of the manner in which the city approved the site.

He says the group has met twice and has voted to sue the recreation

Ailing fish and divorce case on Supreme Court's docket

TWIN FALLS — Cases involving sick catfish, indigency and divorce will be among those heard by the Idaho Supreme Court when it convenes this week in Twin Falls.

Beginning today at 9 a.m., the justices will hear lawyers argue, on appeal, some decisions from lower courts in the Fifth Judicial District. The proceedings will take place in the Twin Falls County Judicial Building.

Among the appeals to be heard Thursday is one by the Fish Breeders of Idaho hatchery of a jury verdict in favor of Rangen Inc. of Buhl. A jury denied a claim by Fish Breeders for damages it claims it suffered when many of its catfish died, allegedly from the use of a chemical purchased from Rangen.

Fish Breeders is claiming that the jury did not receive adequate instructions from district Judge Theron Ward of Twin Falls and that its verdict was inadequate and inconsistent.

The company also is claiming that the district court was wrong in excluding evidence about losses reportedly sustained by other trout farmers who used the same chemical.

The case is scheduled to be heard at 2 p.m.

At 10:30 a.m. Thursday, the justices will hear an appeal by a couple whose indigency applications were rejected by the Cassia County commissioners.

The district court dismissed a request filed by James R. Harris and Dian Jannis Hodge for a declaratory judgment in the case. In an appeal to the Supreme Court, the couple is claiming a continuing right to receive indigency funds — whether or not the county's indigent fund was depleted, as was the county's claim.

During the week, the state's highest court also will hear cases concerning property disputes.

From Cassia County, one case pits Lyle and Lea Nelson against Raymond and Wilma Johnson. The Johnsons are appealing a trial court verdict that ruled the Nelsons had two easements on the Johnsons' farmland. This case will begin at 10:30 a.m. Friday.

And in a case from Blaine County, an attorney for Ester Fairman will state her case for appealing a summary judgment in favor of Dennis and Nancy Berg over ownership of land. The case will be heard today at 9 a.m.

All of the sessions in Twin Falls will be open to the public.

Roads remain icy; truck overturns

TWIN FALLS — Icy highways continued to hamper traffic Monday night, with state and county officers reporting numerous trucks and cars off the highways and roads.

And a number of abandoned vehicles remained in ditches and median strips Monday, where drivers left them during the weekend.

An Idaho State Police officer reported that a grain truck was on its side on I-84, near Bliss, at 10 p.m., with spilled grain blocking both westbound lanes. Officers in the Boise ISP district said it was necessary to call out a snowplow to clear the grain from the highway, although the truck itself was no longer blocking traffic.

All sheriff's offices in the Magic Valley, as well as the ISP, reported that highways were extremely icy Monday night, with some new light snow on top of the ice. However, no serious injuries from accidents had been reported as of 10 p.m.

A three-vehicle accident on South Lincoln Street, at A Street, sent a young Jerome man to the hospital shortly after noon on Saturday.

Officers said a car driven by Marsha Bennett, 29, of Route 1, Jerome, was turning left at the intersection, when a car driven by Bernard R. Walker, 24, of Jerome, struck the Bennett vehicle, pushing it into a third vehicle that was stopped at a stop sign. It was driven by Dean Wayne Esplin, 51, of Jerome.

Tommy Walker, no age available, who was a passenger in the second vehicle, was taken to St. Benedict's Hospital, where he was treated and released.

Melvin Eugene Breault, 43, of Milliville, Utah, was taken to the Jerome hospital by a passing motorist after his semi-truck slid from the freeway and overturned Saturday.

The accident occurred on I-84, just east of Jerome, at about 5:15 p.m.

Breault's truck, owned by H and D Trucking of Preston, slid from the highway and rolled over, causing $10,000 damage to the truck and minor injuries to the driver.

Lynn Wayne Meyers, 22, of Kennewick, Wash., also skidded from the interstate at approximately the same location on Sunday. His vehicle began skidding on ice, left the highway and rolled onto its top.

The driver told officers he was en route to Alaska.

Damage was estimated at $1,000. He was treated for minor injuries and released.

Write-in campaign falls short

TWIN FALLS — A write-in campaign for a Bell Rapids farmer sparked interest in the Twin Falls Highway District election Monday, but it failed to give the challenger enough votes to unseat the incumbent.

Elmer Ihler, the district's board chairman, garnered 127 of the 160 votes cast in the election. Greg Brown, a farmer on the Bell Rapids project, received 32 votes, and Ralph Schnell of Rogerson received one vote.

Ihler, who lives south of Twin Falls, has served on the highway board for eight years.

Most of the write-in votes were cast at the Twin Falls County Courthouse polling place, where the vote was 26 for Ihler and 25 for Brown. Seven votes for Brown were cast at the Salmon River Canal Co. office at Hollister.

Symms to visit on Wednesday

TWIN FALLS — Sen. Steve Symms will make a day-long swing through the Magic Valley on Wednesday.

Symms, who is in Idaho during a two-month congressional recess, will make his first appearance at a Jerome town meeting, which is scheduled for 11:30 a.m. in the Fifth District courtroom in the Courthouse, at 300 N. Lincoln St.

At noon, he will arrive in Twin Falls for a luncheon speech to the Lions Club at the Colonial Gardens restaurant.

He then will drive to Shoshone for a 3:30 p.m. town meeting at the Courthouse.

His final appearance of the day will take place in Hailey, where he has scheduled a third town meeting, to begin at 7 p.m. in the old Courthouse.

On Thursday, Symms will fly to Mackay, Challis and Salmon for more town meetings.

Clarification

TWIN FALLS — The Geraldine Miller who is a defendant in a Fifth District Magistrate Court civil action is from Paul. The Twin Falls law firm of Taylor, Belto, Sinclair and Covington has brought a suit against her, seeking $525.90 for payment of legal services, plus related fees.

When her name originally appeared in the "Civil Court Blotter" section of The Times-News, no address was given for the defendant.

Obituaries

'Tex' Lincecum

BUHL — "Tex" Carlos Olin Lincecum, 80, of Buhl, died Sunday at Harral's Nursing Home at Buhl, after a long illness.

Born Jan. 31, 1903, in Nolan County, Texas, he attended Texas schools and attended Sul Ross College in Alpine, Texas. He married Lois Wootton in Ballinger, Texas, on Dec. 3, 1928.

Mr. Lincecum later owned and operated a lumber yard and did contractor work before moving to Buhl in 1942. He farmed for two years near Buhl, then he owned and operated an auto-parts store in Buhl. He later owned the Utoco Oil Co., now known as the Quick Service, worked for the Green Giant Co. for a time and then sold life insurance until his retirement.

He was a member of the Buhl First Baptist Church, the Masonic Lodge and the Scottish Rites Commandery.

Surviving are: his wife of Buhl; a son, Larry Lincecum of Seattle; and a sister, Varina Curry of San Angelo, Texas.

Haney told the council the project would appeal to young couples because of its proximity to the Lynwood Shopping Center, Albertson's and a number of other businesses along Blue Lakes Boulevard North.

Unlike an earlier plan for the project, which was denied by the Planning and Zoning Commission in September, the present plan sets aside 45 percent of the 1.75 acres contained in the project for landscaping, said Allen Debo, an engineer for J-U-B Engineers Inc., which has been working on the project. This has been made possible by locating most of the parking underground.

In its final version, the project will be composed of three two-story eight-unit buildings and a two-story fourplex, all containing two-bedroom flats.

Charlton said the project was adapted from a similar project built in Salt Lake City.

He said if all goes well, and at least five of the units are sold in the next few weeks, construction could begin shortly after the first of the year.

Idaho's unionization rate among non-agricultural workers is 18.5 percent, only seven-tenths of 1 percent higher than the Utah rate of 17.8 percent and well below the national rate of 25.2 percent, he said.

And Idaho ranks second among the 11 Western states in its attractiveness to manufacturers, according to a study conducted by the accounting firm of Alexander, Grant and Co., Engstrom added. He said Utah ranked fifth among the Western states in that study.

"I think people tend to play on that (right to work)," said Engstrom, who coordinated the state's efforts to lure Stouffer's to Twin Falls.

Stouffer ended months of speculation on Oct. 3 when the Solon, Ohio-based company announced it would locate the new facility in Springville, a city about two miles from Provo. Three cities — Grand Junction, Colo., was the third — waged intensive recruiting efforts to attract the facility, which is expected to provide 300 to 1,000 new jobs.

Jerry Fischer, the manager at Krengel's True Value Hardware in Twin Falls, said: "We probably sold 10 snow shovels all last winter, and we've gone through 150 or so in the past two weeks."

The weather also caused emergency Monday on the Snake River. At Milner Dam, ice almost closed the normal drainage gates and backed up water to within six inches of overflowing into emergency canals. Crews had to open up the gates completely, sending a rush of water downstream to ease the situation, said Warren Travis, the Twin Falls Canal Co. general manager.

Robens and other residents say they are not against the pool, just its location.

The matching grant, awarded by the Idaho Parks and Recreation Department, would go toward the first phase of construction — a lap swimming pool, a separate diving pool and a building for dressing rooms, showers and the district's office. The first phase would cost about $300,000.

A planned second phase would include an enclosure to make the pool an indoor, year-round facility.

ABOVE AND BEYOND

There is a duty which every funeral director has to a bereaved family that transcends professional competence. We expect him to take care of all preliminary details with tact and without delays. We expect him to prepare the remains with a true regard for human dignity and to arrange the viewing in an atmosphere of taste and warm simplicity. We expect him to guide the service and the final journey with an experienced discretion which leaves us virtually unaware that they have been carefully structured. But beyond tact, competence, and technical skill are the subtle areas of empathy where his qualities as a decent human being ease the thorny path of the family through the early days of grief. These qualities make him a funeral director and make the place where he works truly a funeral "home".

Colleges howling at funding plan

By STEVE GREEN
United Press International

BOISE — The State Board of Education began deliberating Monday a controversial budget allocation plan that Idaho college and university presidents say will lead to unfair funding levels for their schools.

State Board of Education Director Charles McQuillen said none of the schools would have major overall budget changes under the new plan, but "each school will receive more funding for its best programs and will lose some for its less important programs."

"No institute supports shifting some of its funding away," McQuillen said. "But no institute rejects having some funds shifted to it."

Education Department spokeswoman Kim Phillips said the goals of the distribution formula change were to "provide for a fair and equitable distribution of the lump sum appropriation to the college and universities."

After claiming lawmakers provide inadequate funding, the board decided last April to begin dividing the higher education appropriation on "an analytical basis."

Previously, the schools were funded on the basis of the previous year's appropriation in what has been an "unanalyzed and unaccountable" system, said Boise State University President John Keiser.

Under the proposed new system, programs within each school are funded according to quality and student demand.

But the new system also is drawing protest from Keiser, as well as the presidents of Idaho State University and the University of Idaho. All claim their schools will suffer from the plan.

Keiser claims the proposed funding revision would "continue to fund Boise State University in a grossly inequitable fashion."

Idaho State believes "the formula is being used as a mechanism to force the university into program reductions," university officials said in a written statement.

Accountants want business tax credit ended

By BRUCE BOTKA
United Press International

BOISE — An accountants group Monday urged the Idaho Legislature to repeal jobs and investment tax credits, saying the state could more effectively help small businesses by offering other types of financial aid.

Members of the tax policy committee of the Idaho Society of Certified Public Accountants met informally with an interim legislative committee studying the state's income-tax structure.

One of the accountants, Boise investment adviser Steve Swanson, said lawmakers should consider establishing a loan fund for fledgling businesses with some of the money now lost through the tax credits and administration of the programs.

However, committee member Rep. Roy Brackett, R-Twin Falls, said so many small businesses fail each year that "I'm wondering if we're trying to help somebody who doesn't have the background or the ability to help themselves."

Roughly half of all new businesses fail within the first two years, he said.

But Swanson said many small business owners simply lack money — not talent.

"Even if they fail, they have created jobs and financial activity for the time they are there," he said.

Swanson said the state shouldn't just eliminate the tax breaks outright.

"The investment credit is viewed as a pro-business item, and we hate to repeal something like that without replacing it with something better," he said.

Swanson said he wasn't sure how much money the state could devote to a credit reserve for small business loans.

However, he said in an interview after the meeting, there is only a "small chance" lawmakers would repeal the tax credits after adopting them to stimulate business growth during the recent recession.

"It puts the Legislature on a roller-coaster, and I think there would be a lot of sentiment against doing something like that," he said.

State court says sheriff had pay hike coming

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Supreme Court ruled Monday Boundary County commissioners improperly reduced the salary of former Sheriff Michael LaBrosse during a budget dispute two years ago.

In a unanimous opinion, the justices ordered a lower court to award LaBrosse the disputed salary amount and to consider awarding him attorney fees.

The former sheriff filed suit against the local officials, claiming they illegally revoked a $300-a-month salary increase he began earning in October 1980.

LaBrosse later resigned his position, citing departmental problems and an intentional lack of funding by some county commissioners."

LaBrosse built his salary hike into the proposed budget he presented to commissioners during summer 1980. The sheriff's budget did not include an overall increase because the salary hike was funded by laying off one deputy, according to court records.

LaBrosse received the higher salary for three months, until January 1981 when commissioners voted to reduce the sheriff's salary to the previous level of $1,100-a-month.

The commissioners said they were forced to chop LaBrosse's salary because Idaho law required them to decide salary increases in April.

Pumping ban may end

BOISE (UPI) — The Idaho Public Utilities Commission said Monday it may revoke a five-year-old moratorium that prohibits Idaho Power Co. from serving new customers planning to irrigate with water from the Snake River.

PUC President Conley Ward said the moratorium no longer appears to be necessary because of a state Supreme Court ruling that outlined Idaho Power's water rights.

The moratorium was imposed in 1977 when ratepayers complained Idaho Power was encouraging agricultural pumping and therefore depleting the amount of water available for the utility's hydroelectric generators.

A court suit arising from the water rights controversy was resolved earlier this year when the state Supreme Court ruled Idaho Power has the right to 8,600 cubic feet per second at Swan Falls Dam.

Ward said the high court ruling will discourage prospective developers from seeking the right to pump from the river, making it possible the moratorium is no longer necessary.

Spokeswoman Dana Howard said the ban was imposed as a temporary measure to halt development until courts began to settle the water-rights issue.

The question of whether Idaho Power gave up its right by failing to actively protect it still must be decided by a lower court.

Commissioners say interested parties have until Dec. 12 to "file initial statements concerning whether or why the embargo should be continued or discontinued."

Idaho Power wants money

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Power Co. says it has demanded that the Boise Project Board of Control reimburse the utility $300,000 for a feasability study it did on power generation at Lucky Peak Dam.

Idaho Power withdrew its offer to purchase the dam's electricity rights last week after the Wilder Irrigation Board rejected the utility's proposal to build a new generation plant at the site, Idaho Power Vice President Logan Lanham said Monday.

The Nov. 17 Wilder District election is binding on the four other districts that make up the control board.

Lanham said Idaho Power had an agreement with the board that in the event its offer was not accepted the district would reimburse the utility for its help in preparing the feasability study.

Aryans lose tax break

COEUR D'ALENE (UPI) — The Aryan Nation Church, a white supremacist organization, has lost its tax-exempt status, and Kootenai County officials may demand payment of back taxes, officials said Monday.

Idaho Deputy Attorney General Bill Von Tagen said the federal government recently ruled the Aryan Nations and related groups will no longer be considered tax exempt, and the state probably also will begin treating such organizations as taxpayers.

Doctor faces sex charges

MOUNTAIN HOME (UPI) — A Mountain Home Air Force Base doctor charged with hypnotizing a patient, then trying to sexually assault the woman is set to appear before a military tribunal Tuesday.

Mary Black, 40, has alleged Capt. Glenn Rych hypnotized her twice during treatment last spring, then tried to assault her.

Prosecuting Capt. Don Self said two charges of attempted rape have been lodged against the physician.

He said the doctor, in his late 20s, could face a term in a military prison if convicted of the felony complaints.

The woman has also filed a $350,000 claim against the federal government as a result of the alleged misconduct, officials said.

Attorneys for the defendant could not be reached for comment Monday.

Europe debates ag support

By BARRY JAMES
UPI Senior Editor

ATHENS — With France and Britain clashing over key policies, leaders of the European Common Market made little progress Monday in trying to save the 10-nation association from financial collapse.

"It was a tiring, futile day," said Irish Prime Minister Garret FitzGerald, who could see no real sign of agreement on any of the major issues at the end of the first day of the European summit.

FitzGerald said the long-term outlook for the community was "poor" as a result of the deadlock.

French President Francois Mitterrand rejected a demand by British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher for a settlement that would ensure Britain does not pay more into community coffers than it receives in subsidies.

Mitterrand accused Britain of breaking its contractual arrangement under the Treaty of Rome, upon which the community was founded 26 years ago. A British official dismissed his criticism.

"I am singularly unimpressed with an argument that something is set in concrete for all time," the official said.

A spokesman for Mrs. Thatcher said "the British delegation obviously finds all this very disappointing. There must be serious doubt whether the political will exists and whether indeed the community will move in anticipation of a crisis rather than when it is hit by a crisis."

Only Britain and West Germany are net contributors to the community budget, much of which goes to subsidize farmers in countries with high per capita income.

MARGARET THATCHER
Very disappointed

FRANCOIS MITTERAND
Stands firm

About two-thirds of the EEC budget — $20.4 billion this year — is spent on farm support.

Mrs. Thatcher is demanding that farm support be strictly controlled. She also wants a "safety net" that would — prevent any member country, such as Britain, from going deeply into debt with the community.

About 2,000 farmers from Greece, 1,000 from Italy and 54 from Ireland demonstrated outside the neo-classical Zappeion Hall in central Athens where the two-day summmit is being held.

They feared the leaders would cut their subsidies and force them to pay a penalty for adding to the community's large milk surplus.

Mrs. Thatcher warned that unless her demands were met she would veto moves to expand the community's revenue base, essential for the Common Market to meet its commitments to farmers and admit Spain and Portugal as members.

A British official said a system in which some countries always pay while others always receive "could not stand up for the future."

He called Mitterrand's rejection of Mrs. Thatcher's position "quite extraordinary." Britain did not mind being a "modest net contributor" to the community as long as France was as well, the official said.

Mrs. Thatcher's stand — described by an Italian official as "very rigid" — could block negotiations with Spain and Portugal, which want to know when they can join the community.

Soviets say Andropov better

By JOHN IAMS
United Press International

MOSCOW — Soviet President Yuri Andropov, last seen in public 109 days ago, is recovering from a lingering cold and is fully in charge of government and military affairs, a Kremlin spokesman said Monday.

"Yuri Andropov is recovering. He is managing in full measure the party and state affairs, including questions pertaining to the U.S.S.R. Defense Council," said Community Party spokesman Leonid Zamyatin.

Zamyatin and two other Kremlin leaders sidestepped further questions on the Soviet leader's health during a news conference on the Soviet position on medium-range and strategic nuclear missiles.

Army chief of staff Marshal Nikolai Ogarkov and Deputy Foreign Minister Georgi Kornienko repeated the Soviet stand to stay away from the Geneva talks on medium-range missiles until deployment of 572 U.S. cruise and Pershing-2 missiles in western Europe was stopped.

On the Soviet leader's health, Zamyatin said, "As Yuri Andropov has recently informed in his reply letter to the leaders of the Movement of Physicians for Peace, he could not meet with them because of a cold."

Zamyatin refused to give any other details on Andropov's health.

"All that I have found possible to say officially, I have said," Zamyatin added.

Andropov, 69, wrote the letter Oct. 29. He was last seen publicly Aug. 18 at a meeting with nine visiting U.S. senators who described his physical appearance as normal for a man his age.

His subsequent prolonged absence has touched off speculation of a major illness and perhaps surgery.

Ogarkov, using wall-size charts depicting the Soviet version of U.S. and Soviet missile potentials, said the deployment of Pershing-2 and cruise missiles "is changing the military equilibrium in Europe and on the global scale in favor of the U.S.A. We cannot permit this."

A Western diplomat said there was nothing new in the Soviet position and described it as an attempt to "to put the blame for the end of the talks on the United States."

Ogarkov warned the collapse of the medium-range talks could spread to the parallel talks in Geneva on limiting strategic nuclear weapons.

"Being deployed in Europe, the American medium-range missiles become a strategic weapon as applied to the U.S.S.R.," Ogarkov said. "Consequently, the fact that the deployment of these missiles has commenced cannot but have consequences also for the talks on strategic weapons."

Rebels scoff at offer of amnesty

By United Press International

Nicaragua is trying to stall in the face of military pressure from anti-Sandinista forces with its latest sweeping amnesty offer and promise to schedule elections, a Honduras-based rebel spokesman said Monday.

The Nicaraguan Defense Ministry said Monday 28 anti-Sandinista rebels and 17 troops had been killed in fighting during the past 10 days.

Junta Coordinator Daniel Ortega read a decree Sunday offering guarantees to exiles to "return to the country and join in the electoral process with full rights to elect and be elected."

The offer, which runs until Feb. 21 and includes rebel combatants but not their leaders, also provides for the return of land or just compensation to people whose holdings were expropriated by the Marxist government.

A spokesman for the U.S.-funded Nicaraguan Democratic Force, or FDN, said in Honduras Monday that FDN leader Adolfo Calero Portocarrero will study details of the decree.

"The Sandinistas are trying to gain time before the military pressure they face" from rebels fighting to overthrow the regime, the spokesman said.

Referring to the announcement by the Sandinista government that it will begin debate Jan. 4 on electoral procedures to hold presidential elections probably in 1985, the spokesman said "the conditions still do not exist to think real democracy can be built in Nicaragua."

Two soldiers and 18 rebels were killed in the region of El Bramadero, 100 miles north of Managua in Nueva Segovia province, when FDN rebels attacked an army patrol Nov. 25, a Nicaraguan Defense Ministry spokesman said.

The army lost another four men in fighting last Thursday near San Fernando, the spokesman said, adding that several firefights the same day near Las Jaguas in Nueva Segovia province caused no casualties.

Walesa asks U.S. to lift sanctions

GDANSK, Poland (UPI) — Nobel Peace Prize winner Lech Walesa called on the United States Monday to lift its trade sanctions against Poland, saying the 2-year-old restrictions had outlived their usefulness.

The former Solidarity leader added, however, he was not proposing restoration of loans or credit guarantees to the communist regime — the most costly penalty imposed by the West after martial law was declared in December 1981.

Walesa said the credit restrictions should remain in effect because Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski's government still does not represent the interests of all the Polish people.

"The sanctions as such were symbolic," Walesa told a crowd of Western reporters gathered at the church of his close friend, the Rev. Henryk Jankowski.

"They had more of a propaganda value than economic. As a symbol, the sanctions have achieved what they set out to do, so now probably they should be abandoned."

Walesa called the news conference to discuss his wife's trip to Norway this week to accept his Nobel Peace Prize.

His wife, Danuta, sitting shyly beside him during the hourlong news conference, admitted she was dreading the public spotlight she will face during her trip to Oslo for Saturday's ceremony.

Weinberger: NATO must beef up forces

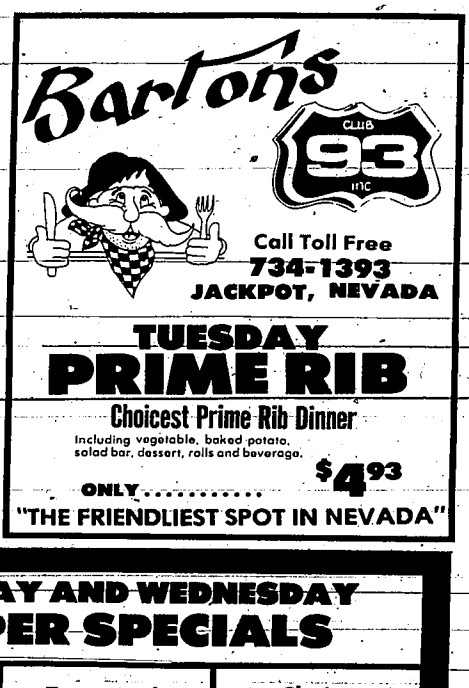
BRUSSELS, Belgium (UPI) — Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger called on NATO allies Monday to strengthen their conventional defenses even as the first medium-range nuclear missiles are deployed in Europe.

"NATO stood very firm and fast (on the deployment issue) during a long period of heavy pressure brought against it from a number of sources," Weinberger said on arriving from West Germany for a two-day meeting of NATO defense ministers.

"Now that deployment ... is proceeding on schedule, we can turn to some of the other vital matters, such as improving our conventional strength, taking advantage of emerging technologies," he said.

As Weinberger arrived, European allies were assessing their defense efforts, focusing on cooperation between armed forces, joint training programs, armaments planning and logistics.

Norwegian Defense Minister Anders Sjaastad presided over a session of ambassadors of the Eurogroup, an association of all the European NATO states except France, which does not participate in the integrated command, and Iceland, which has no army.



Marines tried to aid comrades, killed

By HUGH POPE
United Press International

BEIRUT, Lebanon — On the dusty perimeter of Beirut airport, six off-duty U.S. Marines settled in to sleep in the safety of their reinforced bunker. When they heard the sound of battle, they went to help four friends.

It was a fatal mistake.

Their tiny outpost took a direct hit from a mortar shell Sunday night, killing eight of them. Two others, badly cut by shrapnel but not critically injured, were being flown back Monday to the United States.

"Good men moved out of protective bunkers and into a fighting position. They felt it was the thing to do, and I don't fault 'em. I wish now they hadn't," said their battalion commander, Lt. Col. Ray Smith, his hands shaking slightly.

On the Marine base Monday, the big earth diggers from the new Marine unit, which arrived two weeks ago in Lebanon from Grenada, continued to deepen bunkers. Teams of Marines worked under the sun filling sandbags.

"We were very fortunate to take as many rounds as we did and not have more casualties than we had," Smith said. "If it hadn't been for a lucky hit we would probably have had no casualties."

All day Sunday, the Marines had been on their highest alert rating — Condition 1 — virtually "leaning forward in their foxholes" in expectation of an attack after the first U.S. bombing run against the Syrian army, according to Marine Commander Brig. Gen. Jim Joy.

Night had fallen on the flat U.S. base when a shootout between the Lebanese army and rebel Moslem militiamen spread to include Marine positions on the airport perimeter.

"We took small arms fire as close as 100 meters — 23mm (antiaircraft) fire — probably thousands of rounds," Smith said. "We took rocket-propelled grenades and smaller machine-gun fire from positions 200 to 700 meters away."

At a position near a Lebanese army outpost, a four-man Marine evening watch entered the battle, responding to fire coming from the east and southeast. "We used everything we had, artillery, naval gunfire, tanks," Smith said.

The six off-duty guards of the post — a sniper team, reconnaissance men and a machine-gun crew — soon left their protective bunkers to join the battle.

"They heard their buddies in trouble and went to help them," one Marine said.

"This position should probably not have had more than four men on top," Joy said. "However, we were in Condition 1, we were heavily engaged, the men up there were heavily engaged.

"A 120mm mortar round hit on top, and we lost eight very fine, young Americans and two wounded in action."

Large car bomb kills 14 in Beirut

By JACK REDDEN
United Press International

BEIRUT, Lebanon — A massive car bomb sent a "screen of fire" through buildings and a crowded street in a Moslem neighborhood Monday, ripping the front off an eight-story building, killing 14 people and wounding 83 others.

The damage was increased by a secondary explosion in a paint shop facing the apartment buildings where most of the casualties were reported. Steam rose from the charred rubble six hours after the morning blast.

Police said the explosion in the Moslem west Beirut area of Treek Al Jedida, a working class district, was caused by 350 pounds of explosives packed into a car.

With workers in protective masks still searching the smoking basement of one building, official Beirut radio said 83 people were known injured in addition to the 14 dead.

A caller to a news agency said the bomb was set by the Front for the Liberation of Lebanon from Foreigners, an anonymous group that has claimed responsibility for many attacks in recent years. No independent confirmation was available.

The target of the explosion was not clear.

Flames from the bomb and exploding gasoline tanks of autos turned the buildings into infernos. Police reported people trapped by a "screen of fire" that swept up the fronts of their buildings and forced firemen back.

Most of the victims were caught in their apartments, but the street was crowded with people on their way to work. Schoolchildren were reported among the victims and the charred body of a baby was pulled from the debris.

Through the afternoon, Lebanese civil defense rescue workers searched for more victims. Smoke poured from a small entrance cleared to the basement, with searchers emerging occasionally for fresh air.

A distraught woman called for workers to search an upper floor, and a member of a Lebanese Red Cross crew warned there could be more victims under rubble clogging the floors.

The entire front of an eight-story building was ripped off. The bottom floors were charred, and the concrete first floor was twisted upward by the force.

The corner of a neighboring building was sheered off through its six stories, leaving the staircase dangling from the side of the remaining building.

On both sides of the cluttered road, daylight streamed through buildings whose back walls had disappeared. Shattered cars were hurled against walls.

Front-end loaders were brought in to shovel the debris into dump trucks. Residents of the teeming neighborhood walked through glass-covered roads for blocks around.

Weinberger says U.S. troops may be moved

NUREMBURG, West Germany (UPI) — The United States is considering changing the vulnerable position of the U.S. Marines in Beirut, Secretary of Defense Caspar Weinberger said Monday.

"The Marine positions are being improved. We are looking for other means, of protecting them, including different positions," Weinberger said.

Eight Marines were killed Sunday by Druze shelling, and the base headquarters was blasted into rubble Oct. 23 in a terrorist car bombattack that killed 239 Marines.

Military officials have complained the position is vulnerable and difficult to defend. Congressmen visiting the site have charged the U.S. troops are "sitting ducks."

Weinberger made his comments on a tour of a U.S. armored unit in southern Germany, standing on a hillside overlooking the Hohenfeld practice area near Ravensburg.

Later, Weinberger went to Brussels for a meeting of NATO defense ministers where he praised the alliance for standing "very firm and fast during a long period of heavy pressure" on the deployment of U.S. missile in Europe.

Weinberger said NATO should now concentrate on improving its conventional armaments.

In West Germany, the defense secretary said the United States had protested to the Syrians about their anti-aircraft attacks on U.S. reconnaissance planes.

Weinberger said the United States told Syria, "'We are in Lebanon with the agreement of the Lebanese government and we have to protect our forces. Our reconnaissance is a necessary part of protecting those forces.'"

Most Arab states angered by U.S. incursion

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — The U.S. air strike against Syrian anti-aircraft positions in Lebanon drew reaction Monday from Arab nations ranging from calls for restraint on further military intervention to indignation and outrage.

Damascus, in its latest comment on the Sunday raid, said "the United States was the aggressor and Syria was in a position of self-defense."

The commentary, aired on Damascus radio, said Syria did not want to continue the confrontation but required proof the United States was not trying to provoke further hostilities.

President Reagan said the strike on Sunday by 28 aircraft was launched in retaliation for unprovoked Syrian attacks on unarmed American reconnaissance flights over Lebanon. Two U.S. jets were shot down in the air raid.

Jordan's National Assembly, which includes many Cabinet members, unanimously condemned the attack as well as the new U.S.-Israeli military alliance announced last week, the official news agency Petra reported in Amman.

The reaction of the 75-seat assembly, which is appointed by King Hussein, was considered strong in light of Jordan's close ties to the United States and its poor relations with Syria.

Petra said assembly delegates felt the U.S. had violated its peace-keeping role in Lebanon by launching the air raid.

Saudi Arabia, which has been working with the Reagan administration toward a political settlement of the strife wracking Lebanon, expressed concern the U.S. action would further destabilize the country.

Soviets denounce raid

By United Press International

The Kremlin led a chorus of denunciations Monday for the U.S. air strike against Syrian strongholds in Lebanon, reaffirming Soviet "support and sympathy" for Syria and warning of "unpredictable consequences."

Britain was among the only outright supporters of the action, while Italy hinted that continued conflict in Lebanon might prompt a review of its contribution of troops to the country's multinational peace-keeping force.

The official Soviet news agency Tass termed the U.S. attack "another barbarous act of aggression."

"Washington and Tel Aviv should realize that a Grenadian approach to Soviet-backed Syria is fraught with unpredictable consequences for those who encroach on its independence," the Novosti news agency said.

"We condemn this act of aggression. It has made the entire Soviet public indignant," Kremlin spokesman Leonid Zamyatin said during a news conference in Moscow on arms control.

"Our support and sympathy are with the Arab peoples who are fighting the aggressor that has intruded into their territory."

Zamyatin said the raid was "a new fact of banditry and aggression that has been perpetrated for more than a year by Israeli troops with the backing of U.S. armed forces."

In Peking, a Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman said the U.S. attack and an Israeli air strike against Syrian positions on Saturday have "further intensified the tense situation in the Middle East."

"We strongly denounce those raids," said the spokesman in a release issued by the official Xinhua news agency.

Woman fighting for right to die

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (UPI) — A quadriplegic who wants to starve herself with the cooperation of her doctors and the courts should be denied the right to refuse medical care because it amounts to suicide, a county attorney argued Monday.

"There is only one word for it," Riverside County Counsel Barbara Milliken said, "that's suicide. There can be no other definition and lives don't exist in a vacuum."

Elizabeth Bouvia, 26, sought a preliminary injunction in Superior Court that would prevent doctors at Riverside General Hospital from force feeding her.

Conditions of the requested injunction stipulate that Mrs. Bouvia be given pain killers while she dies, that hospital employees not be held liable and that her death not be ruled suicide, her attorney said.

"Never can there be a right in a civilized society to tell others, over their moral objections, to assist in a suicide," Ms. Milliken argued. "Certainly people die in a hospital, but they die contrary to the efforts of hospital staff."

Dr. Richard Scott, Mrs. Bouvia's attorney, said his client's wish to die does not impose an immoral demand on anyone.

"She asks nothing of the medical staff that is unethical to the medical profession," said Scott, who is also a physician. "She only wishes to be left alone. She doesn't want to be preached to."

He said his client made her decision after a great deal of thought and is mentally competent to do so.

Superior Court Judge John Hews previously granted a temporary restraining order barring the hospital from discharging Mrs. Bouvia from the facility or transferring her out of the psychiatric ward.

Officials set odd record

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — More than 1,200 men celebrated King Bhumibol Adulyadej's 56th birthday Monday with free vasectomies performed by 50 doctors and 85 nurses at the rate of two per minute — some on dining room tables.

Local officials said the number far surpassed the country's record for voluntary mass sterilizations in a single day but the Guinness Book of World Records declined to document the event, saying they had no such category.

Thailand's Population and Community Development Association, a private group, holds a free vasectomy clinic every year on the king's birthday, one of Thailand's most festive holidays.

The vasectomy clinic echoed the gala spirit with popular music, balloons and banners extolling family planning. Free soft drinks, snacks and T-shirts were distributed.

One T-shirt depicted Winston Churchill giving his famous "V" sign with the slogan, "Stop at Two."

"This year we set a new record with 1,202 men registering for vasectomies, which even surpassed our goal of 1,000," said Mechai Viravidya, director of the population control group.

Twin Falls, Castleford rated No. 1

By United Press International

Twin Falls, undefeated after the first week of play, edged Coeur d'Alene for the No. 1 post in the initial coaches' survey of A-1 boys prep basketball teams in Idaho.

Coaches, in ratings released Monday by UPI, put Rigby at the top of the A-2 list, while West Side lead the A-3 roster and Castleford paced A-4 teams.

Twin Falls, at 2-0, garnered 29 points to 28 for Coeur d'Alene, also 2-0. Capital was third, followed by Meridian and Borah.

In A-2 play, Rigby, 1-0, was the unanimous choice of coaches after a week of competition. Next came Madison, followed by Burley, Bishop Kelly and Moscow.

West Side, 1-1, found itself at the head of the A-3 list. The remainder of the top-five found Filer second, trailed by Kamiah, Kimberly and Sugar-Salem.

In A-4, coaches selected Castleford, 1-0, as the best squad early in the year. Greenleaf Academy came in second and Mullan was third. Oakley and Council rounded out the roster.

A familiar lament

Official Verl Sell appears to be ignoring the laments of University of Oregon basketball Coach Don Monson, who continues to argue after being charged with a technical foul during the first half of the Ducks' 65-49 loss to Minnesota Monday night in Minneapolis. Up until this year, Monson was the head coach at the University of Idaho.

Pickett shares team roping lead at NFR

By ANNA WAGNER
Special to The Times-News

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. — Idaho roper Dee Pickett and partner Mark Beers are the new leaders in the world team roping event following Monday's performance of the National Finals Rodeo.

Pickett and Beers are $539 ahead of early leader Leo Camarillo of Rockford, Calif., following a 6.2-second time on their run that was worth $542. That was good enough for fourth place in Monday's go-round after Pickett and Beers failed to place in Sunday's go. Their combined time of 23.2 on three runs gives them second in the average behind the team of Tee Bowman and Clay O'Brien Cooper.

"We're fixin' to stir things up now and win the world," said Pickett.

Another Caldwell roper, B. Woodbury, placed second in Monday's team roping go. He and partner Jake Milton of Torrington, Wyo., had a smooth 5.8 run for $1,626.

Former world champions Doyle Gellerman and Walt Woodard won Sunday's round with a 5.5-second run.

Pickett, a two-event contender, currently leads the calf roping average with a 34.7 total points after three rounds. He finished fourth in Monday's go-round, posting 11 seconds flat for $923 behind the winning 9.0 time of reigning champion and event leader Roy Cooper of Durrant, Okla.

In the saddle bronc riding, Declo's Kent Cooper is holding his own, placing in the past two performances after he narrowly escaped injury in the opening round. Cooper rode for 77 points and second place Monday night after earning 76 points the previous day to split second/third with average leader, event leader and reigning world champion Brad Germundson of Marshall, N.D.

But Butch Small of Dubois has not scored well in the event since his fourth-place finish during the first performance.

Meanwhile, Jerome bareback rider Mickey Young is also having his problems.

Young failed to place in either Sunday's or Monday's go-rounds. He scored 69 on Sunday and 67 Monday to drop to ninth in average.

Young was disappointed with his performance so far.

"I have drawn sorry horses that haven't been on par with other mounts in the draw the past two rounds, with studs that won't buck," said Young.

Ex-Jerome resident 2nd in queen vote

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. — A former Jerome resident, Jamie Nelson, has been named first runner-up for queen of the National Finals Rodeo.

Vandals just stave off tenacious E. Montana

By The Times-News

MOSCOW — Frank Garza and Stan Arnold scored 16 points apiece Monday night to give the University of Idaho 75-67 non-conference victory over Eastern Montana College.

The Vandals, who trailed by as many as seven points in the first half, came back to lead 34-27 at halftime behind an eight-point effort by Garza and a 10-point effort by sophomore guard Matt Haskins.

"There's no doubt about it, they pressed us tonight," said first-year Vandal Coach Bill Trumbo. "We didn't get off to a good start, but we hung in there. Haskins just came in in time to save our rear ends."

Haskins, a 6-foot-4 reserve guard who redshirted last season, shot 4-for-5 from the field in the first half while another reserve, senior guard Freeman Watkins, was 4-for-4. Haskins and Watkins ended the evening with 16 points apiece, as did point guard Stan Arnold. Arnold score 10 of his 12 points from the free throw line and 14 points in the second half.

All five Yellowjacket starters broke into double figures, led by James Lawson with 17 points and guard Jeff Andrade with 15.

After forging a seven-point led at halftime, Idaho had to hold off a furious comeback attempt to EMC late in the game. The Vandals, who has led by as much as 14 points early in the second half, saw their lead shrink to four points, at 63-49, with 4:33 left in the game. But Andrade fouled out, and Arnold converted both ends of a one-and-one to make it 65-59 Idaho. Then Yellowjacket forward Mark Brewer tipped in an offensive rebound with three minutes remaining to cut the margin to four points again, at 65-61. But Arnold went to the line and sank five of six free throws opportunities in the next minute to give Idaho a safe 69-61 margin with 2:01 remaining.

The Vandals shot 62 percent from the field, while the Yellowjackets hit 57 percent. Idaho converted 22 of 28 free throw opportunities and outre-

At long last, Lions own Minnesota

By RICHARD L. SHOOK
United Press International

PONTIAC, Mich. — The difference was work.

Most times in recent years when the Detroit Lions played the Minnesota Vikings, a victory by Coach Bud Grant's team was as certain as a toy shortage at Christmas.

But Monday night Detroit came out on top for only the seventh time in 33 meetings since Grant became coach at Minnesota.

Rookie Jeff Chadwick caught a 10-yard touchdown pass and Eddie Murray added two field goals — all in the second quarter — to put the Lions one victory away from their first conference or division title in 27 years.

"This is a special group of people," Detroit Coach Monte Clark said after his team defeated the Vikings 13-2. "The teams have wanted good things before but weren't willing to work. Intensity has been one thread throughout our success.

"We've been looking for revenge on the Vikings for a long time," Lions owner William Clay Ford said. "This was good timing on our part."

"It was an even game in the second half," Vikings coach Grant said. "Three penalties and a fumble in the first half really did us in.

"Our capacity to make the big play just is not there. Our skilled position players are depleted. That's one of the reasons we played three running backs and it's also one of the reasons we went back to a version of the old wing-T.

"You win with big plays and big play players. I guess the bottom line is we just didn't play well enough to win."

Minnesota linebacker Matt Blair was dissapointed.

"This is a proud team," he said. "This loss is very hard to accept. We have two games left so we just have to go out and give it all we have. In the NFL, you just never know."

Detroit needs one victory, either at Cincinnati or at home against Tampa Bay, in the next two weeks to clinch the NFC Central title. It would be the first time the Lions finished on top since they were NFL champions in 1957.

Detroit, given up for dead five games with a 1-4 record, is 8-6 and has won seven of nine games. Minnesota has lost five of six and is 7-7.

Chadwick made five catches for 89 yards, including an 18-yard catch on third down to keep the 53-yard drive going that he ended with a leaping catch of an Eric Hipple pass in the right corner of the endzone. His touchdown came between field goals of 50 and 43 yards by Murray, then the Detroit defense took over to register a shutout until rookie punter Mike Black intentionally ran out of the endzone with 2:43 to play.

Minnesota had just three scoring opportunities in the game. Benny Ricardo missed a 48-yard field goal with 1:24 left in the third quarter, the Vikings turned the ball over on the Detroit 2 with 10:22 left and Minnesota drove to the Lions' 5 as the game ended.

Billy Sims gained 100 yards for the fourth week in a row, gaining 118 in the first half and 136 on 23 carries overall.

Hipple completed 9-of-16 passes for 120 yards while Minnesota quarterback Steve Dils was sacked seven times for 43 yards in losses. He finished 20-of-33 for 177 yards and was intercepted once.

Nine seconds into the second quarter, Murray kicked his 50-yarder to give the Lions a 3-0 lead.

Detroit squandered two other scoring chances in the first quarter but Sims ran 41 yards from his 5 to put Detroit in position for Murray's second longest field goal of the season.

Phillies' Perez hoping you can go home again

By FRED McMANE
United Press International

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The National League champion Philadelphia Phillies, continuing their youth movement, lopped two more over-40 players from their roster Monday by trading away 41-year-old Tony Perez and 41-year-old Ron Reed in separate deals about the winter baseball meetings.

Perez, who was sent to Cincinnati where he starred in the mid-1970s, and Reed, who went to the Chicago White Sox, were major contributors to the Phillies' championship season but did not fit into the club's plans for next year.

They join Pete Rose, 42, and Joe Morgan, 40, as veteran players cut loose by the Phillies since the end of the World Series.

Perez was obtained for a player to be named later and Reed was acquired for a player to be named later or cash.

Two other minor deals were completed on the first day of the meetings. The San Francisco Giants traded outfielder Champ Summers to the San Diego Padres for infielder Joe Pittman and a minor league player to be named later and Cleveland sent catcher Jim Essian to Oakland for a player to be named later.

In other developments, Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn asked the owners to give full moral commitment to his successor and 11 players were selected by 10 major league clubs off minor league rosters in the annual draft.

The acquisition of Perez by the Reds was an obvious move to help bolster the gate. One of the most popular players ever to wear a Reds' uniform, Perez spent his first 12 major league seasons with Cincinnati and knocked in 90 or more runs a season from 1967-76 before being traded to the Montreal Expos.

"He's a super guy and a super player," said Boston Red Sox manager Ralph Houk, who managed Perez at Boston from 1980-82. "I believe he can still hit and help a ballclub."

Many fans and some of the Reds' players attributed the decline of the team in the standings in subsequent years to the trading away of Perez, who was one of the most respected players on the team.

Perez had three solid seasons with Montreal, then played out his option and signed as a free agent with the Red Sox. Used mostly as a designated hitter with the Red Sox, he knocked in 105 runs and hit 25 homers in his first year with the team and played at Boston through the 1982 season.

He was released by the Red Sox after the 1982 campaign and signed with the Phillies last spring. Perez played a pivotal role in the Phillies' early season success but was used sparingly in the last months of the season as the club won the National League East pennant. He finished the season with a .241 average, six homers and 43 RBI in 91 games. He also contributed a few clutch hits in the Phillies' post-season competition.

"We plan to utilize him in whatever way possible," said Vern Rapp, the Reds' new manager. "He's a very impressive right-handed hitter. We can use him as a pinch hitter or a regular at first base against some tough left-handers. He also has tremendous leadership abilities."

The Phillies were reluctant to part with Perez, but they wanted to select a pitcher in the morning draft and they needed a roster opening. It came down to either Perez or pitcher Steve Comer and the Phillies opted to keep Comer.

Michigan stuns 15th-ranked Georgia, 76-70

ATLANTA (UPI) — Tim McCormick scored a career-high 25 points to pace Michigan to a 76-70 victory over No. 15 Georgia Monday night in the first basketball meeting of the schools.

The Wolverines built a 35-32 halftime lead and widened the gap to 70-58 with 2:28 remaining. Georgia trailed 74-64 with 41 seconds left but got a jump shot by James Banks and a layup from Donald Hartry in the closing seconds to narrow the gap.

Forward Butch Wade scored 17 points for Michigan and guard Leslie Rockymore hit 13. Georgia was led by guard Vern Fleming with 25 points and forward James Banks contributed 23.

Arkansas 79
E. Tennessee St. 50

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (UPI) — Joe Kleine scored 18 points and Alvin Robertson added 14 points and 10 assists Monday night, carrying No. 10 Arkansas in a 79-50 rout of East Tennessee State.

The Razorbacks lost one of their most promising guards, Willie Cutts, in a courtside battle with Coach Eddie Sutton. Cutts stormed off the court in the first half after Sutton pulled him for poor shot selection. The coach said Cutts never will play again for Arkansas.

Leroy Sutton added 12 points on 6-of-6 shooting for the Hogs. ETSU was led by James Tandy with 18 points and Marcus Reese with 10.

ETSU, 1-3, kept it close until about midway through the first half. The Hogs spurted to a 20-10 lead with 9:16 left as Leroy Sutton tipped in a shot by Cutts. It was immediately after that shot Norton came in for Cutts and Cutts left the floor.

The Razorbacks, 4-1, reeled off 7 straight points to take a 36-19 lead at with 2:16 left in the half then stretched to a 22-point halftime advantage when Norton stole a pass and hit a 15-footer at the buzzer. At one point in the second half, Arkansas led by 39 points.

Purdue 77
Boston University 65

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (UPI) — Steve Reid scored all 14 of his points in the second half, leading unbeaten Purdue from a halftime deficit to a 77-65 victory over Boston University Monday night.

Mike Alexander scored 14 of 16 points in the first half as the Terriers took a 25-24 halftime lead. Boston U., 2-2, scored the first basket of the second half but center Jim Rowinski scored a field goal and two free throws to put Purdue ahead 28-27. Reid then made a basket to give the Boilermakers a 3-point lead. Purdue led by as many as 18 points.

James Bullock led Purdue, 5-0, with 15 points, and Rowinski added 14, 10 in the second half. Shawn Teague, a transfer from Missouri, had 13 for the Terriers.

Boston College 87
Puget Sound 71

CHESTNUT HILL, Mass. (UPI) — Michael Adams had 18 points and 6 rebounds in leading No. 15 Boston College over the University of Puget Sound 87-71 Monday night.

BC's leading scorer, 6-foot-11 Jay Murphy, had the flu and played only 11 minutes. But the Eagles, 4-0, still outrebounded the Loggers 46-27, which included 25 Eagle offensive rebounds.

Martin Clark scored 17 points and had 7 rebounds while Roger McCready added 13 points and 5 rebounds. The Eagles led at half 40-33 then broke down the Loggers with full-court pressure throughout. UPS, 3-4, was led by Jerry Williams with 18 points.

Utah 91
Colorado 85

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Angelo Robinson scored 18 points, including two free throws to put Utah ahead for good, and the Utes edged Colorado 91-85 Monday night.

Utah, in foul trouble most of the game, blew a 13-point lead early in the second half as Colorado came back to tie it 82-82 all on two free throws by Vince Kelley with 2:31 to go. But Robinson hit back-to-back free throws 29 seconds later, giving Utah the lead for good. Freshman Albert Springs then made four straight foul shots to keep the Utes ahead.

Tim McLaughlin added 16 points and Kelvin Upshaw 14 points for Utah, 4-1 on the season after winning its last four games. Springs and Chris Winans each had 12, and Manuel Hendrix 10. Upshaw and Springs also had three steals each.

Jay Humphries and Randy Downs led all scorers with 25 and 20 points respectively for Colorado, 3-1. The Buffaloes also got 14 points from Alex Stivrins and 12 from Kelley.

Sage takes third place in state meet

Horner was one of 11 Sage Gymnastics representatives to qualify for the competition, which was held at SportsWorld. Nine teams competed in the event, which was won by Boise. Sage finished third.

Other finishers from Sage included Glenna Dee Jones, third in the vault; Terrie Jerrell, fourth on the uneven bars; and Kelli Points and Freda Trenkle, sixth in floor exercises.

Other qualifiers from Sage were Megan Filmore, Kathee Filmore, Megan Morrill and Patricia Ward.

"I can't get a shot at the money, but I'm hoping that situation will improve. I feel good, collected and aggressive. If I could get horses that will buck, I'll be in strong contention for the championship."

Canadian Robin Burwash scored 78 points on Monday to take first in the round, while Danny Brady marked 80 points to win Sunday's go. Larry Peabody of Bozeman, Mont., is the event leader with an average with 230 points total. Colorado cowboy Bruce Ford is maintaining his lead in the world standings, just $10,000 ahead of Young.

Veteran NFR contender John Davis of Homedale was bucked from his first bull on Monday after earning 75 points Sunday that gave him a split of third and fourth with Nebraskan Ronny Wyatt and Canadian Dale Johansen. Marty Stanaert of Sanger, Calif., marked a high 85 score in Monday's go for first place in the event, while Canadian bulldrider Cody Snyder won Sunday's performance with a 80-point ride. The event average is led by Rickey Lindsey of Huntsville, Texas, with 235 points. Wyatt maintains his lead in the world standings, but is only 200 points ahead of Snyder.

In barrel racing, Didi Taylor of Caldwell tipped a barrel for a five-second penalty and a 21.65 time in Monday's round. She also failed to place in the money Sunday with a 16.8 round.

Oklahoma cowgirl Mickey Maker won that go with a fast 16.3. Monday's event winner was Shaunna Wright of Walla Walla, Wash., who posted 16.39. Colorado barrel racer Marlene Edelman leads the average with a 49.56 total, while Texan Sherry Elms ranks first in the world standings.

Former world champion Byron Walker is hot in steer wrestling, winning the last two go-rounds with times fo 4.6 and 5.4, respectively. He leads the average by a wide margin, posting 17.5 on three head. But Kansan Joe Edmondson is still in the lead for the world championship.

Competition will continue throughout the week, with the final round slated for Sunday.

Noll: Bradshaw in, Stoudt out for Jets

By POHLA SMITH
United Press International

PITTSBURGH — Veteran quarterback Terry Bradshaw, just three days off the disabled list, will take over the Pittsburgh Steelers' collapsing offense if he can get ready in time for Saturday's game with the New York Jets, Coach Chuck Noll said Monday.

TERRY BRADSHAW
Ready or not

Noll said he decided to try to speed Bradshaw's return to action after "sleeping on" and reviewing films of the latest offensive debacle by the Cliff Stoudt-quarterbacked squad, a 23-10 loss to the Cincinnati Bengals at home Sunday.

"We slept on it and we saw some things in the films," Noll said. "We have to do something to get it going. We're not making progress right now. We're going downhill. We've got to reverse that direction."

Whether Bradshaw actually starts the game in New York depends on his progress in practice this week, Noll said. But the coach said he told Stoudt Monday morning that it was possible he would go to the bench after quarterbacking the Steelers with mixed success all season.

The Steelers were 9-2 and on a seven-game winning streak until they began their three-game skid with a 17-14 loss to Minnesota two weeks ago. That was followed by a 45-3 humiliation by the Detroit Lions.

Against Cincinnati Sunday, the Pittsburgh offense generated just 154 total net yards and nine first downs. Stoudt completed eight of 19 passes with two interceptions for 88 yards and one touchdown.

Bradshaw, a 14-year veteran who quarterbacked the Steelers to four Super Bowl championships in the 1970s, underwent surgery on the elbow of his throwing arm during the off-season. Then he repeatedly suffered setbacks in trying to return to action.

On the disabled list all season, Bradshaw finally found relief from pain in treatments on an electronic machine that simulates acupuncture. He resumed practicing with the team last Tuesday and was reactivated Saturday. He did not play Sunday.

"We've got to do something," Noll said. "We've got to try to get Terry ready to go. If he can cut it, we'll go with him, and that's the judgment we'll make this week."

"We're going to go in (to practice) with the idea of sharing time (between Bradshaw and Stoudt) much more than we did this past week with the idea of getting Terry ready."

Noll said Bradshaw threw well in practice last week, but the coach said it was impossible to evaluate the quarterback's arm. He said his decision to try to prepare Bradshaw to take over as starter was based in part on Bradshaw's history.

"It's influenced by what he's done in the past," Noll said. "He's done it, and he's capable of doing it, but not by himself. It takes the whole football team doing its job."

Vandals' Hobart selected coaches' All-American QB

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (UPI) — University of Idaho quarterback Ken Hobart, who broke virtually every existing NCAA Division I-AA passing and total offense record in his four years at the school, has been named to The American Football Coaches Association Division I-AA All-America team.

Hobart joins two other Big Sky players on the select squad: tight end Brian Salonen of the University of Montana and placekicker Tony Zendejas of Nevada-Reno.

Hobart, a 6-foot-2, 210-pound native of Kamiah, passed for more than 10,000 yards in his career at Idaho, second-best in college football history.

Salonen, a 6-3, 231-pound senior from Great Falls, Mont., set every pass catching in Montana's history and led the Big Sky Conference this season in receiving yardage, the first time a tight end has done so.

Zendejas, a 5-8, 160-pound senior from Chino, Calif., holds 80 NCAA and NCAA Division I-AA placekicking and scoring records.

Division I-AA semifinals

UNR draws top-ranked S. Illinois

By RUSS NIELSEN
United Press International

RENO, Nev. — It almost sounds like Coach Chris Ault is hoping for snow when his Nevada-Reno football team travels to Southern Illinois University for a NCAA I-AA semifinal playoff game Saturday.

He told boosters Monday the Wolf Pack showed how tough it is when it took a 20-17 overtime victory from North Texas State in the mud, snow, cold and wind last week.

"Under such conditions, the team that is toughest mentally usually finds a way to win," he said. "I believe that's what happened Saturday."

"Both teams were neutralized by the weather. Neither had a game plan after the first quarter because of it. We just did what we had to do."

He had special praise for split end Alphonso Williams, linebacker Mark McVeigh and kicker Tony Zendejas. Williams caught eight passes, despite a slippery ball. McVeigh had four tackles, including the one that prevented a touchdown when North Texas had the ball on Nevada's one-yard line in the overtime period. North Texas tried a field goal but the ball slipped through the holder's hands. Zendejas, leading scorer in the Big Sky Conference, then came on and booted a 32-yarder to win the game.

"We had the veer offense well-defensed, and I think we would have won regardless of the weather," Ault said. "Bad as it was, the weather didn't distract my team. When the offense came off the field, they talked football. When the defense came off, they talked football. While they talked, the reserves cleaned the mud off the jerseys."

Ault said he doesn't know much about Southern Illinois, aside from the fact it was rated No. 1 in the division.

"They have a solid defense and good special teams," he said. "I think they expected to be playing North Texas. They look to us to be a real sound team."

Once they had a roster opening, the Phillies selected a promising young pitcher, Jay Tibbs, off the New York Mets' Tidewater roster. Tibbs, 21, finished third in the Class A Carolina League in earned run average last season, posting a 2.92 mark and a 14-8 record.

Reed, 41, appeared in 61 games for the Phillies last season and posted a 9-1 record with a 3.48 ERA and eight saves. A veteran of 16 major league seasons, the 6-foot-6, 225-pound right-hander owns a career record of 146-134 with 91 saves.

A workhorse in relief since coming to the Phillies from the St. Louis Cardinals in 1975, Reed has appeared in 55 or more games in seven of the last eight seasons.

"We had to protect ourselves in the event we could not sign (free agent) Kent Tekulve," said White Sox general manager Roland Hemond. "We sent our scouts out to look at the Phillies last September when it looked as if we might be playing them in the World Series and they came back with good reports on him. He still has good stuff and throws strikes. We also like the fact he has been pitching with a World Series club."

In the morning draft, the Mets suffered embarrassment by having two of their highest-rated minor league pitching prospects taken by major league clubs for the sum of $25,000.

In addition to Tibbs, the Oakland A's picked Jeff Bettendorf from the Mets' Tidewater roster. Bettendorf finished second to Mets' farmhand Dwight Gooden in ERA at Lynchburg last season and has a chance to make the A's major league club next summer.

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (UPI) — San Diego Clippers center Bill Walton, who had been enjoying a successful comeback from a string of nagging injuries, broke a bone in his right hand in a 120-99 loss against the Los Angeles Lakers Sunday night and will be lost to the team for about two months.

Walton left the floor after suffering the injury, but following an examination in the Clippers' locker room he returned to play a total of 29 minutes, scoring 20 points.

After the game, he was taken to Daniel Freeman Hospital where X-rays revealed the fracture. Surgery was not anticipated, Daly said.

Walton, who is not expected to play for two months, was not immediately available for comment, nor was Clippers Coach Jimmy Lynam.

Leading the Lakers to the win were Michael Cooper, who had a career-high 17 assists, and rookie Byron Scott, who scored 20 points.

Price is 'Sky player of week

BOISE (UPI) — Weber State coach Neil McCarthy picked senior guard John Price as his team captain, and Monday the Big Sky Conference said McCarthy apparently made the correct choice.

Conference officials picked the 6-foot-2 Price as the league's first player of the week for the 1983-84 season for his role in Weber State's two wins last week, 74-63 over Eastern Washington and 74-73 at Utah State.

Price scored 13 points in the Wildcats' victory over the EWU Eagles and 18 against the USU Aggies to earn the weekly honor. He also had nine assists and six steals in the two games as Weber State upped its record to 4-0.

Other players nominated for the weekly award were: guards Dave Allen of Northern Arizona, Stan Arnold of Idaho and Buck Chavez of Idaho State; Boise State center Bruce Bolden, and forwards Chris Brazier of Montana State and Larry Krystkowiak of Montana. Nevada-Reno did not nominate a player.

Lendl, Martina win easily

MELBOURNE, Australia (UPI) — Top seed Ivan Lendl blasted his way past Australian Pat Cash to move into the quarterfinals of the $1 million Australian Open Monday and then called for a physician to look into a possible kidney problem.

Lendl routed the brash young Australian 7-6, 6-3, 6-3 with a magnificent center-court d.....r. A senior Melbourne doctor later visited the locker room to diagnose Lendl within 15 minutes of the end of his third-round clash.

A friend of Lendl's said the champion, who left the court twice during the 114-minute match, had been passing blood in his urine and although it certainly did not seem to affect Lendl's game he asked for the specialist as a precautionary measure.

The doctor took a sample from Lendl and will have it examined overnight. Lendl is next due to meet fellow countryman Tomas Smid in the quarterfinals.

Smid earlier struggled past Australian John Fitzgerald 7-5, 3-6, 6-4, 6-2 in their third-round match on a bumpy outside court. Eliot Teltscher downed fellow American Rick Meyer 6-4, 7-6, 6-4.

In women's play, world champion Martina Navratilova wasted little effort in blitzing South African Rosalyn Fairbank 6-2, 6-2 in the third round. The effervescent Fairbank could not handle Navratilova's all-court game and bowed out in a brief 48 minutes. Navratilova is now scheduled to meet England's Jo Durie in the quarterfinals.

McMillen eschews politics

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (UPI) — Former University of Maryland basketball star Tom McMillen gave up his bid for a Maryland congressional seat Monday to play another year of professional basketball with the Washington Bullets.

McMillen, 31, had been considered the leading candidate for the Democratic nomination to run in 1984 against 4th District Rep. Marjorie Holt, a six-term veteran and Maryland's only Republican member of the House.

"I made the decision largely because of my basketball career," he said.

A resident of Crofton, Md., the 6-foot-11 forward was traded to the Bullets by the Atlanta Hawks this summer for future first and second round draft choices.

The move fueled speculation that the trade was engineered by the politically active owners of both teams, Ted Turner of the Hawks and Abe Pollin of the Bullets, to put McMillen back in his home district.

But McMillen surprised the Bullets by starting his ninth season in the National Basketball Association with the best statistics of his career, averaging 10 points and 4.3 rebounds per game.

When the team offered him a contract through the 1984-85 season, McMillen said he accepted.

Wilson, Martin go to jail

FORT WORTH, Texas (UPI) — Two players from last season's Kansas City Royals reported to federal prison Monday to begin three-month terms for cocaine charges and could get up to nine days off their sentences for good behavior.

All-Star outfielder Willie Wilson, 28, the 1982 American League batting champion, and rightfielder Jerry Martin, 34, who is no longer with the team, were processed into the Federal Correctional Institution's STAR — Steps Toward Addiction Recovery — program after checking into the prison Monday morning.

"They're eligible for three days off their sentences per month depending on work performance," said prison spokeswoman Delores Nisle.

"They could be doing different things — landscaping, mechanical services, education, food services. No, they won't be making license plates."

Warden Dudley Blevins said Wilson and Martin will get no special treatment during their stay at the prison, a campus of Spanish-styled buildings that has the reputation as a "country club" because it has no fence or guard towers.

"There are rules and regulations and inmates are accountable," he said. "There is a confinement period. They are away from family and community. The removal from society and the community is still here.

Cornhuskers (ho hum) again

By DAVE RAFFO
United Press International

NEW YORK — Since all four ranked teams that played last Saturday were winners, there were no changes in the last regular season listing of the UPI Coaches ratings.

In the only games last weekend, No. 3 Auburn edged Alabama 23-20, No. 11 Florida crushed Florida State 53-14, No. 16 Air Force dumped San Diego State 38-7 and No. 20 Oklahoma trimmed Hawaii 21-17.

Nebraska remained top ranked to complete its wire-to-wire run as the No. 1 team. The Cornhuskers received 31 of 34 first-place votes in the latest balloting by the UPI Board of Coaches and 507 overall points. No. 2 Texas received three first-place votes and 475 points, followed by Auburn, No. 4 Miami (Fla.) and No. 5 Illinois.

Rounding out the Top 20 are No. 6 Southern Methodist, No. 7 Georgia, No. 8 Michigan, No. 9 Brigham Young, No. 10 Iowa, No. 12 Boston College, No. 13 Ohio State, No. 14 Pittsburgh, No. 15 Maryland, No. 17 Baylor, No. 18 Virginia Tech and No. 19 West Virginia.

The final ratings which will determine a national champion will be released Jan. 4 after all ranked teams except Virginia Tech and Oklahoma play in bowl games.

Of the major bowls, the Orange, Cotton and Sugar Bowls on Jan. 2 will have the greatest impact on the national title. Nebraska, 12-0, meets Miami, 10-1, in the Orange Bowl, Texas, 11-0, and Georgia, 9-1-1, battle in the Cotton Bowl and Auburn, 10-1, plays Michigan, 9-2, in the Sugar Bowl.

In other bowl games matching ranked teams, Iowa, 9-2, and Florida, 8-2-1, square off in the Gator Bowl and Ohio State, 8-3, battles Pittsburgh, 8-2-1, in the Fiesta Bowl.

Also, Illinois, 10-1, meets UCLA, 6-4-1, in the Rose Bowl, Southern Methodist, 10-1, plays Alabama, 7-4, in the Sun Bowl, Brigham Young, 10-1, battles Missouri, 7-4, in the Holiday Bowl, Boston College, 9-2, meets Notre Dame, 6-5, in the Liberty Bowl, Maryland, 8-3, plays Tennessee, 8-3, in the Citrus Bowl, Air Force, 9-2, plays Mississippi, 6-5, in the Independence Bowl, Baylor, 7-3-1, takes on Oklahoma State, 7-4, in the Bluebonnet Bowl and West Virginia, 8-3, meets Kentucky, 6-4-1, in the Hall of Fame Bowl.

EAST — Don Nehlen, West Virginia; Serafino "Foge" Fazio, Pittsburgh; Dick MacPherson, Syracuse; Jack Bicknell, Boston College; Jim Young, Army; Frank Burns, Rutgers.

PACIFIC — Rich Brooks, Oregon; Dave Currey, Long Beach State; Jack Elway, San Jose State; Don James, Washington; Terry Donahue, UCLA; Paul Wiggin, Stanford.

NEW YORK (UPI) — The United Press International Board of Coaches Top 20 1983 college football ratings, with first-place votes and records in parentheses (total points based on 15 points for first place, 14 for second, etc.):

1.	Nebraska (31) (13-0)	507
2.	Texas (3) (11-0)	475
3.	Auburn (10-1)	435
4.	Miami (Fla.) (10-1)	375
5.	Illinois (10-1)	373
6.	Southern Methodist (10-1)	345
7.	Georgia (9-1-1)	258
8.	Michigan (9-2)	217
9.	Brigham Young (10-1)	211
10.	Iowa (9-2)	185
11.	Florida (8-3-1)	123
12.	Boston College (9-2)	118
13.	Ohio State (8-3)	92
14.	Pittsburgh (8-3-1)	71
15.	Maryland (8-3)	41
16.	Air Force (9-2)	39
17.	Baylor (7-3-1)	23
18.	Virginia Tech (9-2)	17
19.	West Virginia (8-3)	14
20.	Oklahoma (8-4)	11

Note: By agreement with the American Football Coaches Association, teams on probation by the NCAA are ineligible for the Top 20 and national championship consideration by the UPI Board of Coaches. The teams currently on probation are Clemson, Southern California, Arizona, Wichita State and Southern Mississippi.

The winner of the semifinal match will face the winner of the Western Carolina-Furman game for the division championship in Charleston, S.C., on Dec. 17.

Ault he doesn't know anything about the Salukis yet.

"I know they're a very very fine defensive team," he said. "Most important, they're number one in the country, so they can't be bad."

Last Saturday's game was played before a crowd of just 7,800 in a combination of snow and rain whipped by winds gusting to more than 25 mph.

Saturday's game brought at least two firsts to Nevada. It was the first chance Tony Zendejas had to kick a game-winning field goal. It was also the first time the Wolf Pack, under Ault, won in overtime.

The touchdown pass to Alphonso Williams produced the most controversial call of the day when he pushed off defender Cedric Nelson to make the catch.

"I wasn't going to let him get it," Williams said. "The ref was looking at the ball, so I leaned my shoulder into him (Nelson)."

When Eagles free safety Andre Mosley protested, he was hit with an unsportsmanlike conduct penalty.

"The cause is everything. Those even who are dearest to us must be shunted for the sake of the cause." – Mohandas Gandhi.

Establishing partner's suit against a no-trump game can be a worthwhile cause – up to a point. After that, it may be better to look after better things.

North's reverse in his three-card heart-suit was a forcing bid chosen as the least of evils in a hand difficult to describe.

West led his fourth-best club to East's king and South refused to win, feeling pessimistic about dummy's diamond suit. East continued with the club 10 and South ducked once again to isolate West's suit, dummy discarding a diamond. Should East have continued with a third club to establish West's queen?

Monti Shelton of Dallas saw no future in that course. Of what use would the high club be if West had no entry to cash it? After winning the third club, South would surrender two diamonds and that would be all for the defense.

Instead of leading a third club, Monti shifted alertly to the queen of spades and the game was doomed. When Monti won her first diamond, she continued with another spade and South was destined to lose two Carpenter's Imports Introduces The 1984 PEUGEOTS . . .

Peugeot reinvents the big wagon

It's bigger than the best-selling imported or American wagons. With its back seat up, it holds even more than the hold-over dinosaurs from Detroit. Yet — here's a pleasant surprise — this is one big wagon that is designed not to wag its tail clumsily from side to side on the highway. The Peugeot 505 GL wagon. Huge inside. Not too huge outside. A wagon with the road handling of a European sedan. We've got it. Come and try it.

Cargo-carrying capacities are based on EPA measurements

Antique typewriters

By CHRISTOPHER WILLIAMS
Times-News correspondent

TWIN FALLS — In an electronic and computerized world where the current trend seems to be progress in giant leaps and bounds, a Twin Falls man continues to hold on to a bit of nostalgia.

Bob Snyder, owner of Bob Snyder's Office Supply, stocks the new rage of computerized office equipment with integrated circuits, memories and electronic printing wheels, but what the customers first notice as they walk into his shop is a row of antique typewriters.

"People want to talk about the typewriters before they even tell me what they're here for," says Snyder. "I guess they are interesting because they show so many of the different things that have been tried over the years."

Snyder's collection demonstrates many of the innovations that have been made during the development of typewriters. Among his typewriters is a machine with double keyboards for both upper and lower case letters that was used before a shift between cases had been invented.

Another contraption Snyder possesses was a forerunner to the varityper, once used to put out small newspapers. His favorite is an 1893 Blickensderfer, the first typewriter to have a single element with all the characters on one ball instead of on different keys.

"Most people think IBM was the first to invent the ball element typewriter," says Snyder. "This wasn't the case at all. It had already been invented by two German brothers named Blickensderfer in 1893."

Snyder has collected the typewriters since he became the store's full-fledged owner in 1956. When the store's former owner sold out and moved to San Francisco, he realized he could not take the typewriters with him and offered them to Snyder.

"I just kind of stumbled into them actually," explains Snyder. "The fellow I bought out had to get rid of them. He asked me if I would take them and I said sure I would!"

Snyder owns about 25 of the antique typewriters. The oldest is an 1887 Yost typewriter and the newest is a portable made in the late 1920s and used in World War II.

Where does Snyder get the typewriters? He received about 60 percent of them from the previous owner of his store. The other 40 percent have come from various sources, mostly donations from people who would have thrown them away.

November car sales climb 5.8%

By MICHELINE MAYNARD
United Press International

DETROIT — Domestic automakers, despite bad weather and plant shutdowns, posted a 5.8 percent sales increase for November and their best performance for a 10-day period since 1978.

The firms sold 590,527 cars in November, up 5.8 percent from 558,146 last year. The annual rate of 6.8 million cars lagged slightly behind October's 7 million performance, but was up from 6.5 million last year.

In the final 10 days, sales of 217,540 were up 18.7 percent on a daily rate basis from 160,388 last year. There was one extra selling day in the period this year.

The daily selling rate was the best in five years. The annual rate for the 10 day period was 7.3 million compared to 6.1 million last year.

Analysts had been watching the final 10 days to see whether the industry's year-long recovery might have stalled. The firms posted two consecutive sales declines in the first 20 days of November due to strong sales last year.

But GM had a 20 percent increase in sales on a daily rate basis in the final 10 days, rebounding from two successive sales declines that had pulled the rest of the industry down. The automaker said sales in the period were the best in four years.

Ford Motor Co. posted a 13.6 percent increase in November sales, selling 139,319 autos versus 122,661 last year. Ford sales for the final 10 days were up 15.8 percent and its sales are up 15.9 percent for the year.

"We lost a few late-November sales to the Midwest snow storms, but still had a very strong sales month," said Ford Vice President Philip E. Benton, Jr.

Chrysler Corp. said its sales increased 10.1 percent in November. It sold 61,605 autos versus 55,921. Analysts said the performance would have been stronger had workers not struck Chrysler's Twinsburg, Ohio, plant resulting in the brief shutdown of the firm's assembly plants.

Chrysler sales in the 10-day period were even with last year. Its sales so far this year are up 22.6 percent.

Among the smaller companies, American Motors Corp. had a 38 percent increase in November, selling 18,604 autos versus 13,461 last year. AMC sales for the period also were up 38 percent. Its sales for the year are up 79 percent.

Much of the hike was due to a 44.3 percent increase in the 10-day period. A VW spokesman said he had no specific explanation for the increase. VW sales are down 7.4 percent for the year.

Honda said it sold 5,804 cars in November. Its sales of Ohio-built models were 2,275 in the 10-day period and are at 35,096 for the year.

GM-Toyota car deal unnecessary: Iacocca

CHICAGO (UPI) — Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca said Monday the joint carbuilding venture between General Motors Corp. and the Japanese automaker Toyota is unnecessary because both companies are so large.

Iacocca said both car manufacturers "are the big guys" in their league and have no real need for each other. GM is the world's largest automaker and Toyota the third largest car company.

"U.S. manufacturers can learn from the Japanese, but should not act like them or be like them," Iacocca said during the taping of a Phil Donahue show to be aired today.

His comments came in his first nationally televised interview in three years.

"The GM-Toyota deal should have been stopped. They don't need each other," Iacocca said, noting the public will eventually have to pay the price of the joint agreement.

The joint agreement, which was signed by the two automakers in February, calls for collaboration in building a subcompact model at a vacant GM plant in Fremont, Calif.

The Federal Trade Commission is still examining the deal for possible antitrust violations.

Iacocca, whose company markets cars made by the Japanese automaker Mitsubishi, said the agreement with Mitsubishi differs from the GM-Toyota joint pact because its focus is on importing rather than building automobiles together.

"We cut a great deal of fat from the company to make it work and now that we're operating at this level, there's no need to rehire the surplus we had in management," he said.

About 20,000 white collar workers were laid off, he said, calling those workers a large part of "past management sins."

Iacocca said, however, plans are being made to rehire workers, who are responsible for building.

Consumer outlook: Pay more in '84

NEW YORK (UPI) — Consumers can expect to pay 5 percent more for both essentials and the better things in life in 1984 than they did in 1983, according to a survey by Standard & Poor's Corp.

The increased cost of such items as food, clothing, most leisure time activities and a new car will be below the expected 5.3 percent inflation rate, the survey showed.

The survey indicated however that the family budget will be strained for such items as natural gas, up 15 percent, and health care up 11 percent.

"Food prices should rise about 5 percent in 1984, nearly double the increase due in 1983." The culprit will be grain prices, Richard Bogacki, S&P food analyst said.

The payment-in-kind program and summer drought will combine to boost prices of many farm commodities — which make up 33 percent of the retail price. The cost of processing and bringing the food to the market should rise only moderately.

"The higher grain prices have induced farmers to trim their herds, which in the short run has led to increased supplies of pork and beef, but (meat) production next year will suffer," Bogacki said.

Grain-based products, such as cereal, bakery goods and salad oil also will be selling at higher prices. Bogacki said fresh fruit and vegetable prices are almost impossible to predict, and will be a "swing factor in the 1984 price outlook."

One of the smallest price rises in 1984 should be in clothing, where prices are expected to inch up over 1983's small 1.9 percent gain, the survey showed.

The cost of health care will continue to rise next year, although the pace of increases will slow a bit.

In 1983, the estimated $362 billion spent on health care was equal to 10.4 percent of the Gross National Product. The average annual growth rate of health costs between 1981 and 1990 is expected to be 11 to 12 percent, compared with the 13.2 percent compound annual growth in the ten years through 1981.

Substantial prices rises are not expected in the automobile industry in 1984. The biggest price boosts will be among larger and luxury models, the survey showed.

Former U&I executive dies

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The funeral for Joseph A. Wood, former U & I, Inc., chief executive officer, will be today in Salt Lake City.

Wood died Saturday. He was 93.

Wood was president and general manager of U & I, formerly Utah-Idaho Sugar, from 1958 through 1963 when he retired. He worked for the company for 48 years, and served as its chief accountant, auditor and assistant treasurer before becoming chief executive officer.

GM, IBM lead late rally, hold mixed close

By FRANK W. SLUSSER
United Press International

NEW YORK — Aided by a late rally in General Motors and IBM, stocks finished with mixed results Monday despite fighting in Lebanon and continued high interest rates.

Automobile issues in general helped the late rebound along with some transportation issues and takeover situations. But some oil stocks sank following Ohio Standard's negative report on the Mukluk field.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which lost 9.86 Friday, rebounded 5.29 to 1,270.53. The Dow, which hit an all-time high 1,287.20 last Tuesday, dropped 12.20 overall last week.

The New York Stock Exchange index rose 0.11 to 95.77 and the price of an average share increased four cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock average rose 0.33 to 165.77. Declines topped advances 873-725 among the 2,024 issues traded.

Prices improved after Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker said the board has made no policy changes recently. He said the recovery "hinges on maintaining the progress against inflation" and warned the "danger has not passed."

Volcker said the economy is at a turning point and warned "any attempt to push interest rates down would over time be self-defeating," particularly if it "increases inflationary fears and risks."

"There was a surprising amount of strength in the market considering the news from Lebanon over the weekend," said William Goldstein of Selected Shares Inc., Chicago. "If there had been any really nervous investors around, the market would have skidded."

"We are living at a time when the international arena doesn't disturb the market as much as it did several years ago," said Joseph Broder of Stuart, Coleman & Co. Broder said the market was being buffeted by yearend trading cross currents.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 106,866,410 shares compared with 118,053,020 Friday.

The American Stock Exchange index lost 1.09 to 223.84 and the price of a share lost eight cents. Declines topped advances 386-214 among the 819 issues traded. Composite volume totaled 7,845,300 shares compared with 7,172,920 Friday.

The National Association of Securities Dealers index of OTC stocks fell 1.42 to 282.49.

On the trading floor, Diamond Shamrock was the most active NYSE-listed issue, off 3⅝ to 20⅝ following a block of 1,300,000 shares 19½. Ohio Standard skidded 2⅛ to 43⅝.

Sohio said preliminary data from the Mukluk exploration field offshore Alaska's North Shore were not promising. Diamond Shamrock said it probably would have to write off its investment in the Mukluk project.

Among the other companies involved in the field, British Petroleum lost 1½ to 22⅞ and Shell ½ to 43½.

Gulf Oil, also a Mukluk paticipant, fell ⅛ to 44¼. Oilman T. Boone Pickens and associates raised their stake in Gulf.

American Telephone & Telegraph "old" stock was second on the list, up ⅛ to 64¾. AT&T when-issued was third, unchanged at 20¾.

Pan American World Airways was fourth, up ⅜ to 8¾. Airlines generally were strong after posting strong November traffic figures.

General Motors gained 1¼ to 74¼, Ford ½ to 42 and Chrysler 1 to 29. The automakers reported an 18.7 percent increase in late-November sales.

IBM, downgraded by some analysts, rose ¾ to 118⅜. The company raised its stake in Rolm Corp. Rolm, a 2¼ loser Friday, lost 1¾ to 54. Merrill Lynch lowered its Rolm earnings estimates and published reports said AT&T's sale of old equipment could hurt the firm. Northern Telecom fell 2⅝ to 43 on the report.

Esquire soared 6⅝ to 23⅝. Gulf & Western agreed to acquire Esquire for $25 a share. Gulf & Western was unchanged at 29½.

Trane Co. plunged 3¼ to 42¾ and American Standard 3 to 31. American Standard has agreed to $500 million stock acquisition of Trane, which had fought a bid by IC Industries. IC Industries stock (ex-dividend) added ¼ to 44¾.

Bangor Punta spurted 4½ to 25¾ and Lear Siegler slipped ½ to 47⅝. Lear Siegler bought 20 percent of Bangor Punta stock and plans to acquire the rest. Bangor Punta Chairman David Wallace said opposes the bid.

Ti-Garo Inc. climbed 2¾ to 21¾. The Gastonia, N.C. firm has worked out a plan with Lazard Freres to go private.

Superior Oil rose 1⅞ to 36¼. Superior rescinded a preferred dividend declaration that had been designed to thwart takeover bids. Former director Howard Keck had challenged the new dividend.

Grain futures

CHICAGO (UPI) — Wheat, corn and oats were lower and soybeans substantially lower at the close Monday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat was off 2 to 4 cents, corn off 3¼ to 5¼, oats off 1¼ to 3, and soybeans off 8 to 20¼ cents.

Soybean oil was limit-down at various times while soybeans were near limit-down before recovering late in the session, mainly on professional short-covering.

The market had little general support other than commercial buying. Commercial firms were active buyers of corn and, to a lesser degree, of wheat.

Wheat was pressured by Canada's sale of 1.4 million metric tons to China and Egypt's purchase of 120,000 tons from France.

Stability nearing for fuel industry

By JAMES J. DOYLE
United Press International

LOS ANGELES — Oil expert Dan Lundberg says the five-year drop in gasoline prices may soon stabilize because consumption, which has also been falling since 1978, is beginning to level off.

"If consumption should level off, it could very well mean prices would bottom out," Lundberg said. "The long-awaited recovery of the industry may be showing up at last."

The nationwide overall average price of gas dropped nearly another half cent in the past two weeks. The overall average price, including all taxes, was at 120.96 cents per gallon, down 0.49 of a cent since Nov. 18, Lundberg said.

The difference between the retail and wholesale price declines, Lundberg said, will undoubtably show up on the next 50-state Lundberg Survey. Dealers do not normally pass along the price drops immediately because they do not pertain to current fuel inventories.

At full-service pumps, the overall average of regular leaded gasoline was 129.09 cents per gallon, down 0.41 cent. Regular unleaded was 135.48, down 0.31, and premium unleaded was 144.23, down 0.16.

At self-service islands, regular leaded was 110.29 cents per gallon, down 0.59, regular unleaded was 117.71, down 0.53, and premium unleaded was 129.79, down 0.47.

Retail dealers have "waited patiently" for the economic recovery to hit their industry, Lundberg said. "The overall (profit) margin is 10.34 cents per gallon for all overhead costs," he said. "But taxes nationwide average 22.65 cents per gallon, and dealers have to collect twice as much for the government as they do for their own operating expenses."

Gasoline costs have fallen along with falling consumption, he said. The all-time high consumption was 115.4 gallons during 1978. In 1982, it was 100.7 billion gallons.

"It may be that 1983 is the first year since 1978 when gasoline did not decline over the prior year, Lundberg said. The August, 1982, to August, 1983, figures for consumption show an increase of 4.7 percent.

"There is an evident turnaround in the long decline of consumption since 1978," he said.

Typewriters

and another from former Twin Falls Mayor R.J. Schwendiman.

Snyder says he makes an effort to find out the history behind all of his old typewriters.

"I find out about them mainly through a book I have, which lists different kinds of machines, the years they were made, and who developed them," says Snyder.

Though most of them are in basic working order, Snyders' typewriters would need quite a bit of work to be restored to their original form.

"Most of the typewriters use old-style ribbons that are not available today, but I could rewind current ribbons on the old spools," explains Snyder.

Snyder has no plans to restore the typewriters. He says it would be too expensive and would not be worth the trouble.

"You would have to put $100 to $150 in one of them and they really aren't worth anything when you get through," says Snyder.

He estimates the value of the typewriters at about $20 each and says he keeps them as more of a curiosity item than anything else.

"People who come in really find them interesting," he says with a smile. "I think when people come in they like to feel at home. They typewriters are a diversion and they help customers to feel comfortable."

In addition to the typewriters, Snyder also has an old adding machine, an antique Dictaphone that was used during World War I and a set of city directories for Twin Falls dating back to the 1930s.

"I'm not a collector, I'm an accumulator," laughs Snyder.

When all is said and done, Snyder says he will probably pass his "accumulations" on to the store's next owner or donate them to a museum.

"I'll probably either sell them to a collector or buyer or if somebody bought me out and really wanted them, I would probably throw them in with the store," says Snyder.

"I also understand there is a museum in Minneapolis, Minn. that has over 400 old typewriters and I would have no objection to giving mine to them."

Feldstein shrugs off stories, plans to stay

By DENIS G. GULINO
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Sticking to his theme that large deficits could imperil the economy, Martin Feldstein said Monday he has no plans to leave his job as the president's chief economist despite White House criticism.

The chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers, in a brief appearance during an American Enterprise Institute seminar on economic problems, said, "I plan to stay in the administration and to continue to advise the president on matters of economic policy."

Feldstein said there is no actual basis for assuming he is in conflict with the president. "A few news articles in recent days have asked why, if I disagree with the president, I don't just leave the administration or remain quiet," he said.

"I reject the premise of those questions. I support the president's program and believe that his fiscal policies in the past three years are an outstanding record of achievement in changing government spending and our tax system."

William A. Niskanen Jr., another member of the three-man presidential council on hand, provoked laughter by prefacing his own remarks with a reference to the Feldstein flap. "I'm aware that anything I say about fiscal policy can be held against me," he said.

Feldstein's subsequent remarks about deficits still included his usual emphasis on themes that apparently rankled White House aides — that uncontrolled budget deficits could harm the economy in future years and that so-called contingency taxes would help.

But Feldstein also added some uncharacteristically partisan remarks blaming the Carter administration for letting deficits get out of control in the first place.

MARTIN FELDSTEIN
Calls deficits a hazard

"Nearly two thirds of the current structural deficit was inherited from the Carter administration," he said, referring to that amount of red ink economists blame on problems like obsolescent industries with deeper roots than cyclical recessions.

Meanwhile, there have been hints that White House spokesman Larry Speakes may have been at least indirectly chastised by his boss for the manner in which he implied to reporters Feldstein was on his way out last week.

Both the New York Times and the Washington Post reported over the weekend that Reagan let it be known he disapproved of Speakes' mispronunciation of Feldstein's name and the unusually direct way in which he implied a presidential eviction notice was all but on the way.

Feldstein Monday said any implication that he opposed high defense spending was wrong. "I believe that our country needs a strong defense capability and that we can afford whatever it takes to provide that capability," he said.

Feldstein said he has never criticized the administration's defense program "and anyone who thinks I have is wrong."

Feldstein repeated his often expressed warning that, "It would be unwise to assume that (economic) growth alone will reduce the deficit to an acceptable level."

Feldstein praised the administration's tax cuts, saying they have done more good than harm. And he said the 1983 and 1984 deficits are not as hazardous to the economy as "the prospect of the long string of deficits that would remain in the future if Congress fails to act."

Feldstein also repeated his recommendation for both spending cuts and "a contingency tax increase that could trigger on in October 1985."

Other leading economists at the seminar debated whether huge deficits simply meant government made bad budgeting judgments or whether the system by which the United States generates and pays its bills is intrinsically flawed.

CEA member Niskanen sided with the group that sees major flaws. He warned his fellow economists to take the move to add a constitutional amendment requiring balanced budgets far more seriously.

He said economists should be "looking not for villains but something that is wrong with our fiscal processes."

Charles Schultze, Feldstein's counterpart in the Carter administration, took the opposite view that there is no "monstrous, inexorable budgetary flaw" but only bad decisions that made the deficit grow.

"Let's not go mucking around" with the system, he said.

All quiet on labor front during 1984

NEW YORK (UPI) — Next year is expected to be a comparatively quiet one for labor, according to a Standard & Poor's Inc. report on union wages and contract negotiations.

Next year some 2.7 million workers will be covered by new contracts as the automobile, railroad, and coal industries sit down at the table to negotiate agreements, said the Outlook, a publication of the credit-rating company. This compares with 3.6 million workers affected by new contracts in 1983 and 3.7 million in 1982.

The publication said unions would be looking to restore some wage concessions made during 1981 and 1982 because of increased corporate profits. It cited Chrysler, which obtained substantial wage concessions from its workers as part of its government rescue program, as recently agreeing to a two-year, 29 percent wage hike for its union workers.

Generally, management will not "loosen its purse strings" much in 1984 despite higher profits, the report said, because deregulation and foreign competition will cause corporations to keep increases in wages and employees to a minimum.

The study also forecast that job security would continue to be a major issue at the bargaining table. Even though the jobless rate is expected to decline to about 8 percent, it is still high by historical standards, the report said.

Nader flays SEC for lax policies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumer activist Ralph Nader charges the Securities and Exchange Commission is allowing business executives to get around a federal requirement to report personal buying and selling of their companies' stock.

The SEC requires prompt disclosures of so-called "insider trading" to enable it to enforce rules that protect stockholders not privy to closely held information.

Nader Sunday released a survey of the SEC filings of 20 of the nation's largest firms which he said showed fully half of their executives did not report such transactions as required.

Nader called on SEC enforcement chief John Fedders "to bring enforcement actions to stem this tide of executive law breaking.

"The figures revealed reflect a dismal enforcement record that will further breed disrespect for the laws governing corporations and their executives," Nader said.

An SEC spokesman, Andrew Rothman, responded to the Nader charge, saying, "We are aware of the problem and have taken steps to address it."

The rule requiring the disclosures is known as "Section 16-A." The publication of the daily SEC reports on legal insider trading is closely watched by the investment community. When executives sell large blocks of stock in their own companies it is often a sign of major pending developments for that particular company.

Olivetti sets lathe terms

LEGNANO, Italy (UPI) — The Olivetti Group said Monday its subsidiary, Esercizio Pietro Pontiggia, has reached a marketing and technical cooperation agreement on numerical control lathes with Lodge and Shipley of Cincinnati, Ohio.

The Italian firm will supply the lathes to Lodge and Shipley for marketing in the United States, Canada and Mexico and grant it a manufacturing license on them within two years, Olivetti said.

Hyster accepts bid

PORTLAND (UPI) — The $338.1 million buyout bid of ESCO Corp., the Portland-based steel parts manufacturer, was accepted Monday by lift-truck maker Hyster Co.

As a result of the reorganization, which still needs to be approved by those holding a majority of the outstanding shares of Hyster common stock and receipt of the necessary financing, Hyster will become a private company.

Approximately 80.5 percent of Hyster will be owned by ESCO, which currently owns about 19 percent of the firm's 4.9 million shares; 8 percent will be held by the present Hyster management, and 11.5 percent will go to affiliates of the banks providing the financing for the reorganization.

The bid involves a price of $69 per share for Hyster stockholders, other than ESCO.

The bid compared with an offer of $63 per share — $58 in cash and $5 in preferred stock — made in September by Kohlberg, Kravis, Roberts & Co., an investment banking firm. ESCO's offer was made in late October.

Mesa grabs more stock

AMARILLO, Texas (UPI) — Mesa Petroleum Co. announced Monday its investor group had purchased another 675,000 shares of Gulf Oil Corp. stock, increasing its holdings to 12.9 percent of the total outstanding shares in the nation's fifth-largest oil company.

The Mesa group's purchase Friday cost about $31.5 million and included voting rights with those shares. The group now has 21.3 million shares of Gulf stock.

As before, Mesa said the group intended to continue making purchases of Gulf stock.

'Forced heirship' cited in Louisiana

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Heartbroken Mother," who had a decision to make concerning how her estate should be divided among her children, you responded with the question: "Where is it written that children should automatically get what their parents have worked and saved for?"

The answer is: "In the Constitution of the state of Louisiana," Abby. Louisiana is the only state in the United States that has what is known as "forced heirship." It's 25 percent to 50 percent -- depending on the number of children -- of the deceased parent's estate, irrespective of whether the children are deserving or whether it was the wish of the parent to exclude a child from the inheritance.

The majority of Louisiana residents are not aware of this law. You would be doing the people of Louisiana a great service if you would print this letter and make them aware of this archaic and unjust law in order for them to take action through their legislators and correct this injustice.

-- STUCK IN LOUISIANA

DEAR STUCK: If anyone living in the state of Louisiana wishes to challenge this so-called "archaic and unjust law," I recommend that he/she retain a Louisiana attorney and go to work on it. I have an agreement with the Louisiana Bar Association -- its members don't write advice columns and I don't practice law.

DEAR ABBY: Being a single girl, I am at a loss as to how to graciously turn down a date. There are some men whom I choose not to date for one reason or another, but I can't think of a polite way of saying, "Thanks, but no thanks" without hurting their feelings.

If I say, "I'm busy next Saturday night," they ask for Sunday, or Monday, or Tuesday, and I have to lie again. And when I say I'm busy on all those dates, I am asked when my first free evening is, and then I am stuck!

Abby, can you, or any of your readers, suggest a polite way to decline without hurting a man's feelings?

-- THANKS BUT NO THANKS

DEAR THANKS: Although it would save him a lot of time and repeated turndowns, it's not easy to tell a man that you don't want to go out with him next Saturday, Sunday, Monday or ever, without hurting his feelings.

Gentlemen? Ladies? Here's a tough one for you, and I welcome your suggestions.

DEAR ABBY: Four years ago our home was burglarized. Fortunately, we were insured. Among the items that were stolen I listed a pair of diamond earrings valued at $3,500.

My insurance company reimbursed me for the earrings and I replaced them with a similar pair.

A few days ago I discovered my "stolen" earrings in an evening bag I seldom use. What should I do now?

-- MIXED EMOTIONS

DEAR MIXED: Inform your insurance company immediately that the earrings you thought were stolen were only misplaced. And be prepared to return the $3,500.

(If you're single and want to know how to meet someone decent, see Page 20 of Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular." Send $2, plus a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

MOM'S STUFFED MUSHROOMS

1½ pounds medium mushrooms
1 package, 8 oz. size, sausage
½ cup shredded mozzarella cheese
½ cup buttered seasoned bread crumbs

Remove and chop stems from mushrooms. Preheat oven to 450 degrees. Sautee sausage until well browned. Drain on paper towels. Reserve 2 to 3 tablespoons drippings from skillet. Use to cook mushroom stems. When lightly sauteed, add sausage, cheese, bread crumbs. Fill mushroom caps. Place on cookie pan. Bake for 15 minutes or until the mushrooms are tender. Serve hot. Makes about 2½ dozen appetizers.

Give stability

NEW YORK (UPI) — The no-strings-attached love of grandparents can provide stability for teenagers and be invaluable in overcoming personal problems and family tension, a magazine article says.

Writing in the December issue of Seventeen magazine, Dianne Hales says such unconditional affection can provide a sense of security and emotional sanctuary from normal living pressures.

YWCA marks anniversary, eyes women's needs for 1980s

NEW YORK (UPI) — The Young Women's Christian Association, begun in the United States as a circle of prayer for 35 lonely women far from their homes and working for poverty wages in sweat-shops during the last century, marks 125 years of action this year.

There will be cake-cuttings, contests, carnivals, clean-ups, song-fests, seminars, speak-outs, Frisbee tournaments, feasts, quilting parties — and maybe even a prayer or two to continue the tradition.

Among groundbreaking social achievements of the YW's 125-year history are:

- The first day nursery in the United States, 1864, Philadelphia.
- The first free typewriting instruction for women, 1880, New York.
- The nation's first public cafeteria, 1891, Kansas City.
- The first Native American girls clubs on reservations, 1892, Oklahoma.
- The first interracial conference in the South, 1915, Louisville.
- The first international conference of women physicians, to consider the physical and emotional needs of women, 1919, New York.

The YWCA has grown from its tiny beginnings to 2.5 million members linked to 450 comunity and student associations operating at more than 4,000 locations nationwide. While most certainly mainly for women, it is not for women only.

Boys and men swim in some of the YW pools, sign up for courses and otherwise participate where invited.

Facilities range from large buildings to historic houses, storefronts and mobile vans. Education programs run the gamut and include computers, welding and plumbing. Most are light years removed from the first typing class.

Activities, tending to center on education and personal development, are popular for three reasons: they are begun in response to need; they are offered at convenient locations; the charge is affordable, if not free.

There are special programs for teenagers as well as for seniors, refugees, the handicapped and disadvantaged, and other groups with special needs.

The circle of prayer, per se, is no more, but the tradition of 13 decades of meeting needs of girls and women, from the job market to the supermarket, in the nursery and neighborhood streets, continues, says Sara-Alyce P. Wright, executive director of the national organization based in New York.

Is the Y still "Christian" — specially since the circle of prayer fell by?

"Yes, we still have a Christian purpose," Mrs. Wright said. "We examine the lifestyle of Jesus to see if we still are on target. We recognize his concern for the downtrodden. Early in his ministry he gave attention to ministry to women.

"Jesus was not above the masses, you know. He was with the masses. We are a movement rooted in the Christian faith."

The World Week of Prayer for the YWCA and YMCA, an annual event, provides the opportunity for Ys to examine programs, determining if they are on target. The theme for the 1983 week of prayer is, "In Solidarity With Christ."

Each YW in the United States will check up on how it stands in the struggle for peace and justice, freedom and dignity for all people.

They ask how well they are meeting the needs of the hungry, the imprisoned, those who have left their homes, who live in fear, are poor or suffer oppression or are disabled.

Mrs. Wright, whose first exposure to the YW was at the Phyllis Wheatley Branch in Indianapolis, Ind., in the 1920s, said what has happened at the Ys since she started at the age of 5 has been exciting, including desegregation.

Her Y was for black girls and women; segregation prevailed.

Mrs. Wright said desegregation went into effect as a result of convention action in 1946.

Desegregating years before the big civil rights movement in America is just one more example of the YW anticipating and making changes, Mrs. Wright said, noting one imperative of the YWCA of the USA is elimination of racism.

"Diversity, community service and a robust responsiveness to the tempo of the times key all YWCA work focusing on women's changing roles," Mrs. Wright said.

YWCA priorities for the 1980s include:

- Empowerment of women through legislation and legislative support systems.
- Promotion of a national policy of full and fair employment.
- Prevention of teenage pregnancy.
- Protection of the vulnerable from violence.
- Establishment of a child care services network.

The American YWCA, prompted by the needs of young women in newly industrialized cities, traces its origins to New York City in 1858, three years after a similar organization, was founded in England. The world organization followed in 1894 and a U.S. national organization in 1906.

Mrs. Jewel F. Graham, president of the YWCA of the United States, said, "Our anniversary theme, 'YWCA — Still Pioneering,' links our past with our future. Since its founding the YWCA has enabled women and girls to face the succeeding decades of challenge and change by offering them programs, services and policies addressed to major aspects of their lives."

The national birthday party will be marked at each YW next April 26.

A closer key anniversary event was the Oct. 16 dedication of the new national YWCA Leadership Development Center in Phoenix, Ariz.

Mrs. Wright said the center will provide indoor and outdoor areas for training, leadership, development, study, contemplation and group learning.

The YWCA is funded through United Way allocations, membership dues, individual contributions and program fees.

Mrs. Wright, a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh and University of Pennsylvania and named a "Distinguished Daughter of Pennsylvania" in 1975, is the wife of the Rev. Emmett F. Wright, pastor of Christ Memorial Baptist Church in St. Albans, N.Y.

A lifelong social worker executive with a distinguished national reputation, Mrs. Wright is a member of the National Advisory Committee for the White House Commission on Aging.

She is a past president of the National Association of National Voluntary Health and Social Welfare Organizations Inc., and was instrumental in forming a new coalition known as the Independent Sector.

She is a board member of the National Center for Voluntary Actions and is an elected member of the House of Delegates, Council on Social Work Education.

Mrs. Wright announced at the YW board meeting last spring she intends to retire within the year but will remain until a successor is found. A search is underway.

Thought for today

A thought for the day: Scottish poet Robert Gilfillan said: "There's hope for every woe and a balm for every pain, but the first joy in our heart never comes back again."

Treatment improves

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The treatment of menopausal symptoms has come a long way and women no longer need to suffer hot flashes, insomnia and depression.

Dr. Penny Wise Bufford, author of "No More Hot Flashes and Other Good News," said Monday hormone therapy treatment is available to help menopausal women avoid such puzzling and painful symptoms.

Menopause occurs when women, usually in their late 40s or early 50s, stop menstruating. Symptoms include hot flashes, night sweats, insomnia, depression, urinary tract infections, an increased risk of heart attack and brittle bones, Dr. Bufford said.

"All these things come with menopause," she said at a two-day conference on health care for women in the 1980s. "The good news is we can get rid of them with hormone replacement therapy."

Dr. Bufford, an associate professor of family medicine at the State University of New York, Stony Brook, said the treatment of menopausal symptoms has become more sophisticated over the last 30 years.
